MINE PEACE PREDICTED BY JOHNSON

Today

Hail Mustapha Kemal.
Indiana Fights Crime.
Fifteen Billions Gone.
Crime Assorted.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

YESTERDAY, the new republic of Turkey, ten years of age, started a three-day celebration, worthy of the Arabian nights. One million five hundred thousand men, women and children had their parts given them in parades, pageants, oratorical and athletic contests, theatrical performances.

From every part of Turkey couriers brought little bags of earth, to be emptied on the site of a magnificent edifice, to be called "The House of the Republic," and presented as the nation's gift to Mustapha Kemal, Turkey's powerful ruler.

Two hundred flying machines dropped on modernized western Turkey, on the thousands of mud-house villages and nomad tents, 50,000,000 messages from the government of the republic. One of them reads:

"Mustapha Kemal is one of us, he is the greatest of us, he is all of us."

IN GREAT disturbances, individuals become important that in peaceful times might not be noticed.

The French revolution and its wars produced Napoleon. The "big war" produced Mussolini, Kemal Pasha, Stalin, Hitler, four such as the world had never seen operating simultaneously.

INDIANA, FIGHTING a crime wave that this country will have with it for many a day enlists two thousand men, including volunteers from American Legion posts, to police all roads in the state. Five airplanes from Indiana's National Guard will co-operate, while motorized squads of machine gunners patrol the highways, and:

"Sand bags will be piled up as barricades to prevent vigilantes from being rushed by criminals in automobiles, armed with machine guns."

With such a pretty picture of American civilization in 1933, it was time to get rid of prohibition that has financed crime through bootlegging.

SINCE COLUMBUS discovered America, according to the Bureau of Mines, fifteen billion dollars' worth of gold has vanished more or less mysteriously.

Five billion dollars' worth of the gold is supposed to be in the gold hoards of enormously rich Indian princes. Much has been buried with dead people. Men dig it from the ground, and then bury it again.

Much gold is in wrecks at the bottom of the sea. Fish that swim above the treasure would give you ten million dollars' worth of it for one good sized worm.

IN PHILADELPHIA, the United States government, having on trial a state senator and 75 other defendants, shows that merely handing ten thousands of dollars of bootleg money to the senator was not all of the interesting performances.

For instance, murder was "hushed up" for cash. A "drifter," who had been "hanging around a whisky still, drinking liquor and undistilled mash, bothered the still owners, who finally tied his hands and feet with wire."

"Then," said the witness, "he died on them."

The owner of the still said it cost him a good deal of money to "fix" that murder.

BROOKLYN, BIG "city of homes," supplies its daily crime story. One gangster tried to kill another, and missed. The gangster shot at, said:

"Five hundred dollars to anybody that will get Gill."

Gill had done the shooting. According to the police, a gangster named Martin obliged, and killed Gill.

When Martin asked for his money, according to police, Mr. Cavanaugh, whom he had obliged, invited him to step into an automobile to discuss payment.

Martin was found later, where he had been thrown from the automobile, with two bullets in his head, and no five hundred dollars. Those that lead an honest life may be interested to know that the other kind has its dangers.

A NEW cancer theory is advanced by Prof. Fischera, Italian scientist, who tells the International Cancer Congress at Madrid "the drying out of glands because of age" is the chief cause of cancer.

He urges "replenishing of glandular secretions" as a treatment. It should be possible to test the soundness of that theory by post mortem examinations.

WE ARE off the gold basis, and are buying gold at $1.25 an ounce above the price that the rest of the world pays. For the United States the price went up six cents more on Saturday.

The dollar went to bed on Saturday night worth 64.96 cents. Those that should know say the government plans to force the dollar still lower, and buying gold at whatever price may be necessary will do it.

CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR IN 'DUEL'

Herron, McNair Meet; Former Linked in Contract Deal

The political pot bubbled over today as the two mayoralty nominees spoke from the same platform in the Fort Pitt Hotel, while a Democratic Council nominee at another meeting called on Mayor John S. Herron to throw light on an East Liberty realty transaction involving the Flinn garbage contract.

Herron and his Democratic opponent, William N. McNair, exchanged verbal blows at a packed meeting of the Hungry Club.

The meeting was enlivened by a spat between McNair and Councilman W. Y. English. English was twice howled to his seat by the vociferous audience.

Both Herron and McNair answered questions put by those present. Asked if he would be free of Coyne influences if elected Mayor Herron replied:

"Mr. Coyne has been my friend for years. We worked together on the same buildings before either of us became active in politics. Coyne never asked me to do a dishonorable thing. If elected I will not be unduly influenced by him but I will not close my ears to any meritorious suggestions he may have."

HERRON HITS FOES

Herron said that some of McNair's friends (not Mr. McNair) were "villifying him." He added:

"They apparently realize the tactics of Mr. Mackrell have sent him forlorn to the Democrats for consolation. We are sorry to lose Mackrell and Malone but we miss them just as much as if any two of you gentlemen here today were to walk out."

Herron said he was for the NRA but gave Republic County Chairman W. H. Coleman who criticized it the right to his own views.

McNair told his questioners he favored public ownership of utilities. The present method of

SLAIN GIRL FOUND IN SEWER

Sex Maniac Suspected In Mystery Murder Near Verona

Murder, spiced with mystery and violence, quickened suburban Verona's quiet morning today.

The victim, an attractive girl of 18, was found stuffed into a storm sewer drop on the Allegheny River boulevard, about midway between Verona and Sandy Creek station.

She was clad only in her underclothing, and that had been partly ripped from her body. A bullet had pierced her left breast, passed through her heart and lodged under the skin of her back.

MANIAC SUSPECTED

County Detectives Michael McDermott and Peter Connors were of the opinion that before she had been slain she had been attacked. They believed some sex-starved maniac might have been the slayer.

The body was found at 11 a. m. when Mrs. Esther Abraham, of 220 Penn street, Verona, passed by the sewer opening with her small son, en route to a grocery store.

The boy called his mother's attention to blood spattered on the pavement. She peered into the sewer and saw the body, huddled in the bottom of the six-foot enclosure.

George Wallet, of Verona, was passing at the time. Mrs. Abraham told him of her discovery and Wallet called Police Chief John Bright, of Verona.

SLAIN AT DAWN

When Deputy Coroners R. D. Neumann and Roy Addelsburger arrived they found the body still warm. The chances were, they agreed, that the girl had been slain shortly after dawn.

Late today detectives had not succeeded in establishing the girl's identity.

She was 5 feet 4 inches tall and weighed about 130 pounds. Her dark brown hair was cut in a boyish bob.

Her eyes were bluish-gray. On the ring finger of her left hand was a silver ring with a small ruby setting.

The body was taken to the County Morgue, where Dr. J. W. Means was to perform an autopsy.

The Threat to a Free Press

The following editorial is reprinted from the New York Herald-Tribune of Saturday, October 28:

WE WISH we could share the cheerful optimism with which Prof. Lindsay Rogers views the prospect of licensing the press in the general cause of NRA. It is enough for him that the constitutional guaranty would still stand, no matter what might be said or done under any act, and that, anyway, "No responsible intelligent person has ever thought of the possibility of newspapers being brought under the licensing provisions of the act."

We think he is right as to the constitution. Even if the left-wingers of the President's advisers do talk glibly of enlarging and packing the Supreme Court in order to weaken its restraints upon Congress and the executive, we still have faith in the vigor of that ancient instrument.

BUT HE misses the whole point of the alarm which newspapers are expressing throughout the country. The constitutional protection of a free press might still stand. But the NRA system of codes enforced from Washington provides an ingenious and highly effective device by which this protection could be evaded and rendered of small practical effect.

At the present time the threat of withdrawing the Blue Eagle offers an obvious means by which a newspaper might be intimidated into supporting the administration regardless of its editorial convictions. The device of the Blue Eagle is in itself an ingenious kind of control by permit. Beyond that lies the authority formally to license.

It is pleasant to know that Prof. Rogers is against licensing the press. But it is not important. For unfortunately, his words bind nobody. The law gives the President the right to license whom and when he chooses.

How completely Prof. Rogers misses the whole point of the objection is shown by his attempt to compare NRA control to the workmen's compensation laws. Would any newspaper object to conforming to such laws, he asks.

THE ANSWER is, of course, no, for the reason that these laws are enforceable in the traditional American fashion by an orderly resort to the processes of justice. There is no dictator sitting in a state capitol with authority to "crack down" on an alleged offender and condemn him publicly as a slacker without any court trial.

Most of the early hysteria with respect to the Blue Eagle has passed. But the possibilities of centralized control which the device offers have been made abundantly plain.

Whether NRA threatens only to withdraw its emblem, as today, or, in a later and grimmer phase, threatens to withdraw a license, its power to intimidate a newspaper, to discourage honest criticism and procure insincere support is so plain that not even Prof. Rogers' optimistic pleasantries can make it a laughing matter to any editor or publisher who believes in the integrity of his profession and views it, as does the constitution, as a fundamental condition of democracy.

If Prof. Rogers still thinks that such fears are chimerical, he might try his theories as to the innocuousness of a licensing system on the broadcasting companies of the country and study the utterances of the Federal Radio Commission. The radio act gives no right of censorship to that commission. Yet criticism of the NRA has been stilled on the air. How? Because that commission has the power to license—or not license.

We repeat what we said in an earlier editorial: freedom cannot be licensed. Ask the broadcasting companies. They know.

STEEL HEADS MEET WITH ROOSEVELT

Recess to Draft Offer After Plain Talk By President

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP)—An agreement late today on the long standing dispute between the operators and miners in the "captive mines" of Pennsylvania was predicted today by Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator, after a conference between President Roosevelt and the operators.

The President had a plain talk for over an hour with the officers of the steel and iron companies who operate the mines.

An adjournment was taken to permit the drawing up of a settlement proposal. Johnson, smiling, as he hurried from the White House, said:

"I am very hopeful of an agreement today."

In the conference, Mr. Roosevelt brought up his demands for a further reduction in the price of rails to be purchased by the carriers through a government loan.

EASTMAN ATTENDS

Joseph B. Eastman, the railroad co-ordinator, who on Saturday accused the steel companies of "prior consultation and collusion" in offering a price of $37.75 a ton for the steel, attended the conference.

The steelmen, headed by Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel, flatly declined to talk upon leaving the White House.

Donald Richberg, counsel for NRA, joined Gen. Johnson and the President in a determined effort to end the troublesome "captive mine" labor issue which has resulted in thousands of miners remaining away from the pits for more than a month.

Those who accompanied Taylor included three lawyers, Nathan L. Miller, Paul D. Cravath and H. A. Moore.

Women See Thief Take Jewels

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 30.—A burglar who entered the hotel room of Mrs. W. U. Christman, wife of the managing editor of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Castle, of 830 Mellon street, Pittsburgh, early today escaped with jewelry valued at $1,000.

The robbery occurred in the Lord Baltimore Hotel, where the women had been staying while Mrs. Castle was visiting her son at the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

They were awakened by the burglar's movements in the room and saw him scoop up the jewelry and run.

Mrs. Castle is the widow of Attorney Homer Castle, one time Prohibition candidate for Governor. The Castles were divorced a number of years ago and Attorney Castle died a year ago in Buffalo.

Doomed Man Gets Reprieve Extension

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Charles E. Washington, Negro, who received a three-day reprieve from President Roosevelt two minutes before he was to have ben executed last Friday, today was granted 25 more days of life.

Convicted of the murder of a local taxicab driver, Washington was recommended for a further reprieve by the Department of Justice to permit further investigation.

Traffic Snarled, Movie Interior Damaged

Hundreds of Pitt students, celebrating their football victory over Notre Dame, rioted and crashed downtown theaters today.

Twenty-two were arrested, one a girl.

Mounted police broke up surging throngs in Fifth avenue, at Smithfield street; Sixth street and Duquesne way, and at the Aldine Theater, Liberty avenue. The disorders tangled traffic.

At the Aldine, just reopened last Friday for a Mae West picture, the students broke past the doormen, and, once inside, tore up

Boys Arrested Passing Democratic Vote Pleas

Police today responded energetically to a secret general order to pick up all bill passers—by arresting more than a score of persons distributing Democratic campaign literature.

Later, all but three were released.

The order for the arrests was issued by Supt. of Police Franklin T. McQuaide, who said today that it was based on a city ordinance that did not "specify Republicans or Democrats."

One man, Howard Berringer, 54, of 232 Isabella street, accused of passing Democratic campaign publicity in Hazelwood, was asked by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Central Police Court if he did not know that a permit is necessary to distribute literature.

Berringer replied:

"Well, I distribute the Pittsburgher every week, and I don't have to have a permit for that. I even leave one at the Mayor's office and one for Director Harmar D. Denny. No one ever told me I had to have a permit."

The Pittsburgher is a publication known to be friendly to Republican policies.

Berringer was sentenced to pay $10 fine or serve 10 days in jail. The same sentence was given two companions, James Sullivan, 37, of Castle Shannon, and Arthur Cummings, 38, of 736 Reedsdale street.

At East Liberty Police Station 16 Western Union boys and four supervisors were held in the cell room for a time, accused of distributing an eight-page paper bearing publicity of William N. McNair, Democratic candidate for Mayor.

They were released when an official of the Western Union Company pointed out that no permit is required when literature is handed in the door of a home.

DETROIT MOBS STORM PLANTS

DETROIT, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Half an hour after police had reported the dispersal of a mob of 2,500 men who raided five plants where tool and die strikes are in progress, another outbreak occurred at the Midland Steel Products Company, where windows were broken and automobiles overturned.

Fifteen automobile loaded with policemen and three cruisers were sent to the plant at 12:45 p. m., when plant officials reported a mob was storming the plant, hurling bricks through windows and overturning cars in a company parking lot.

The police reported the men sped away in automobiles when they arrived, and 10 minutes later a call was issued from a division of the Murray Corporation of America, a mile away.

The Murray call was the seventh for police assistance as rioters, in several hundred automobiles, cruised through the city's manufacturing section, attacking tool and die plants, speeding away before police could mass enough men to turn them back.

Liquor Boat Sunk In Ocean Gun Fight

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 30.—(INS.)—Riddled with bullets in a 45-minute battle with a Coast Guard patrol boat which she had previously rammed and damaged, the 64-foot speedboat Frances sank in Long Island Sound today with an estimated $35,000 cargo of liquor.

One member of the Frances' crew was wounded by machine gun bullets.

$200,000 Fire Hits Jacksonville Beach

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 30.—(AP)—Fire, swept onward by a strong wind off the Atlantic early today wiped out two blocks of ocean-front property at Jacksonville Beach, causing a loss unofficially estimated at from $100,000 to $200,000.

Summer residences, concession booths and amusement buildings were burned. About 60 feet of the boardwalk was destroyed. Origin of the fire was undetermined.

Confetti Ban Lifted For Halloween Fun

The police today told Halloween revelers to let their joy be unrestrained but not to take too much for granted.

In a general order, Police Supt. Franklin T. McQuaide added that this year confetti would be permissible.

For 15 years confetti has been officially banned on the grounds that it is insanitary.

Supt. McQuaide explained that in years past people would throw confetti at your face, which is O. K. with the police. But other people would scoop up the same confetti and hurl it a second time, which is not O. K. and very contagious, according to the health department.

Supt. McQuaide prohibited the use of talcum powders, ticklers, flying wedges and "wife beaters," which he described as noisy but harmless devices.

One hundred policemen will be on special duty downtown tomorrow night to enforce his orders.

NEW SETUP SEEN AS CRITICISM OF NRA PROGRAM GROWS

ONE DIRECTOR PROPOSED FOR ALL UNITS

Administration Sees Lack of Co-Operation Causing Strife

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Confronted with increasing criticism, President Roosevelt and his advisers are studying plans for a major change in the direction of the whole recovery program.

The purpose is to bring about a more responsive co-ordination of the various alphabetical recovery agencies that have been pulling at cross purposes.

The President is determined to make the recovery machinery function as a single purpose agency, rather than disjointed units, to attain the goal of business revival, higher commodity prices and re-employment.

Several methods have been proposed. An important administration group favors placing supervision of the recovery program under a single official, directly responsible to the President. Another leading suggestion is creation of a sort of "super recovery board," small in size, to co-ordinate the activities. Leading private citizens might be called to serve.

Officials declare while no definite plan has been worked out they anticipate a change. There is a feeling in administration circles that much of the present criticism is due to clashing personalities and opposing policies within recovery ranks.

It is no secret that NRA blames the AAA, which in turn is critical of the NRA. Officials of both of these branches accuse the public works administration of not getting funds out fast enough on quick projects to absorb unemployment and put money in circulation to increase purchasing power.

The AAA is under fire of the farmers. Business shows uneasiness under NRA so-called "strong-arm" methods. Consumers complain over price fixing.

Supreme Court to Upset NRA, Beck Declares

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(Universal.)—The National Industrial Recovery Act, progenitor of the NRA, is unconstitutional and will be so ruled by the United States Supreme Court, it is held in a brief drawn up by James M. Beck, former Solicitor General of the United States and a representative in the present Congress from Pennsylvania.

The opinion was written by Mr. Beck, a renowned authority on constitutional history who argued some of the government's most notable cases before the Supreme Court, at the request of Fortune magazine, which presents it in the issue to be published tomorrow.

Mr. Beck believes the case may prove the greatest in American history and upon the court's decision "may hang the fate of our form of government." He holds that the NIRA raises questions which go far beyond the mere mechanics of government, and points out that the purpose of the Constitution was to protect the people's right by limiting the powers of government and to set up a deadline beyond which a government could not go.

He said:

"It attempted to give concrete expression to our deathless Declaration of Independence, that a man had certain inalienable rights which no government can take from him.

"Among these inalienable rights is that of liberty of contract and the greater liberty to pursue any lawful business free from unreasonable governmental interference. The Supreme Court has said so on innumerable occasions."

The lawyer specifically refers to the efforts to compel Henry Ford to sign the automobile manufacturers' code of the NRA as emphasizing a point upon which the whole constitutionality of the NIRA hangs.

Bakery Strike Here Averted by NRA

A threatened strike of 500 bakery workers here was believed averted today by NRA representatives, who persuaded spokesmen for both sides to appear before the NRA Labor Board representatives in Washington Wednesday.

The workers, mostly route salesmen and drivers, have asked higher wages.

FARMERS ASK U. S. EMBARGO

DES MOINES, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—An embargo, prohibiting sale of farm products below cost of production was demanded of governors at a 10-state agricultural conference today by the National Farmers Holiday Association and the National Farmers Union.

Governors of five states, delegates of four others, and representatives of half dozen farm organizations of the midwest attended the conference, called by Gov. Clyde Herring, of Iowa.

The Holiday Association and the Farmers Union set forth the following demands:

1—That the President of the United States declare a moratorium on all mortgage foreclosures and evictions until farm prices are restored to a "cost of production" level.

2—That the President peg prices of all industrial commodities at cost of production levels.

3—That the President: (a) immediately expand the national currency to restore and support the cost of production price levels; (b) stop substitution of credit or debts for currency; (c) require the Treasurer to take control of all monetary gold; and (d) remonetize silver on such ratio as will serve the best interest of producers.

BLAST BLAMED ON FRICK FOES

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 30.—A dynamite blast early today wrecked a truck and garage in the rear of the home of Frank Stanna, a merchant, of Smock, Pa., near the Colonial No. 3 mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company.

No one was injured, although the explosion blew windows out of the Stanna home.

The Stanna store had been used as unofficial headquarters for the Miners' Independent Brotherhood, a group which has announced it wants to go back to work.

The destroyed truck had been used in hauling members of the Brotherhood to meetings.

It was estimated that 10 sticks of dynamite were used.

RISE IN FOOD PRICES HALTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—The general upward trend of retail prices was reported halted today by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor.

The report based on prices October 10 shows an increase in retail food prices in only two representative western cities in the list, Denver and Salt Lake City.

Compared with prices of October 15, 1932, Denver food prices were up 6.1 per cent, but compared with prices of September 26, this year, the increase was only 0.4 per cent.

In Salt Lake City prices were up 4.9 per cent compared with October 15, 1932, but showed an increase of only 1.5 over the cost on September 26 last.

Decreases in retail food costs were reported at Butte, Mont.; Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle. Portland showed no change.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Convicted of the theft of 244 books from the San Francisco public library, John Cousins, 53, was sentenced to 30 days in jail here.

UNION MAN HITS STEEL FIRMS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—P. J. Morrin, labor representative, today contended the proposed NRA code for the structural steel and iron fabricating industry had been drawn up "for the purpose of accomplishing the sinister and anti-social objectives of the United States Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation."

Morrin made this assertion at a hearing on the projected code. He spoke as general president of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

Declaring the major steel companies had anti-union motives with relation to the iron and steel erection industry, he demanded a seperate code for that industry.

Referring to United States Steel and Bethlehem Steel, Morrin said:

"These two have united in their efforts for many years to eliminate labor unions and independent erectors who employ organized labor, from the structural steel erection industry."

Roosevelt, Bankers Meet on Guarantee

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Details of participation by mutual savings banks in the federal insurance deposit fund which becomes effective January 1 were discussed today by President Roosevelt with a group of bankers.

Philip A. Benson, of New York, president of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks who headed the delegation, said the conference was called at the suggestion of the bankers for the purpose of co-operating with the President.

BRITISH GOLD AID HINTED

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, British debt negotiator to the United States, conferred today with Eugene R. Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

This conversation, without diplomatic precedent, was believed to have hinged on possible methods of joint control over world gold prices by the United States and Great Britain.

Sir Frederick was accompanied by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Acheson when he called at Black's office. Earlier he had conferred at some length with Acheson.

Black refused to state what the discussion was about. Black facetiously remarked:

"He talked in English and I could not understand him."

Unusual significance was attached to the conversation in view of widespread convictions in financial circles in New York and London that a gigantic currency war might develop from President Roosevelt's decision to purchase gold abroad as one step in his program to raise American commodity prices.

The White House intimated, in commenting on these reports, that friendly co-operation between the United States and Great Britain would be welcomed by the administration.

RETAILING CODE MAJOR TEST FOR NRA

Millions of Employes Affected by Rules Effective Today

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Most of the country's retail stores with millions of employes began putting into operation today the single compact applying equal standards of trade honesty and fair competition to all.

Officials regarded this NRA retail code as the greatest experiment in the industrial recovery program.

Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, waited the outcome of today's steel conference to decide definitely upon a plan for starting almost immediately on a westward tour of the country. He wants to make several speeches directed at what he considers misunderstandings of the industrial program, and to observe conditions at first hand.

A reason why particular importance attached to the retail code was that unlike most manufacturing industries, hardly a unit in the army of stores regimented under the compact is engaged in interstate commerce. Hardly one, until the passage of the industrial law, could have been reached by federal regulation.

Even under the new law the extent to which regulation may be enforced has not been established clearly.

Only the declaration of the industrial act that the employment emergency is a burden upon interstate commerce gives the federal government any right to get at local trade, and this authority will expire in 1935 or whenever the emergency is declared at an end.

Officials believe success of the program must rest chiefly on the will of business to rule itself, and to conform out of self interest. They are looking also for action by states to establish laws for permanent regulation.

DOLLAR FALLS ON NEW GOLD MANEUVER

America Will Invade World Markets For Metal

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—With the dollar tumbling in foreign exchange dealings in response to President Roosevelt's decision to invade the world gold markets, the administration today pushed the domestic price for newly-mined gold to a new high figure.

It established a rate of $31.96 an ounce, 14 cents higher than on Saturday.

Meanwhile, the price of gold advanced in London by 37 cents, figured at today's foreign exchange opening of $4.80 to the pound.

Today Washington price was 47 cents above world quotations, while on Saturday there was a margin of $1.25.

PROGRAM PUSHED

While these developments were taking place, the administration went forward with its plans for buying gold abroad, a decision which was reached at a conference of the nation's fiscal officers yesterday at the White House.

By these purchases, Mr. Roosevelt apparently hopes to steady—but not, for the time being, to stabilize—the foreign exchange value of the dollar.

Beyond that he hopes to raise commodity prices to give the farmer and manufacturer a profitable return on their products.

ECONOMISTS EXPLAIN

Economists explained that buying gold abroad for dollars (even though through the process of international settlements the metal is eventually paid for in commodities) differs but little from selling dollars in foreign exchange.

Little favorable reaction was found among Senators in Washington.

Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, Republican member of the Finance Committe, contended:

"If we attempt to buy gold abroad, it will mean that the whole world will throw a wall around themselves so far as the export of gold is concerned. It will lead to a complete disruption of foreign exchanges.

"This is a very unwise policy and, after the President has tried it for a few days, he will realize and, I hope, back out of it."

Senator Davis (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, said:

"I don't know what the objective is."

Gold Embargo Demanded In France

PARIS, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—A gold embargo to fight America's "new offensive against the franc" was demanded today by former Premier Tardieu's Nationalist newspaper Liberte.

This stand was taken in support of other suggestions that an embargo may be necessary as the result of American gold pruchases which some financial experts viewed as carrying possible danger to the gold in the Bank of France.

'Everyone Knows'

PEGGY LAWTON RICH

DIVORCED? YES SAYS PEGGY

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Indignation flared in the deep blue eyes of Peggy Lawton Rich last night when she learned that she must reveal in court whether she ever was married and divorced. Rather than answer such obvious questions, Peggy said she would carry the issue to the appelate division of the Supreme Court today.

The matrimonial questionnaire was submitted by Jack de Ruyter, society man, whom Peggy is suing for $250,000 because he neglected to marry her. De Ruyter obtained an order requiring the flaxen-haired former wife of Freddie Rich, orchestra leader, to answer:

"Were you ever married?

"If so, did your husband divorce you?

"If so, were you not forbidden to remarry?"

All of which, Peggy declared, is altogether unnecessary since anyone who reads newspapers must know that Freddie Rich divorced her recently in this state and that the decree forbade her to remarry.

In the divorce decree obtained by Rich de Ruyter was named as co-respondent.

WIGGIN AVOIDED TAXES, QUIZ INDICATES

Banker Used Personal Trading Company in Operations

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Albert H. Wiggin, who made a fortune out of speculation in Wall street securities while head of the Chase National Bank, utilized the market operations of a personal trading company to avoid federal income taxes in the boom years, it was learned today.

Revelation of Wiggin's tax-avoiding scheme will be made at the Senate banking inquiry, which resumes tomorrow.

Wiggin was reported to have escaped heavy taxes through a short sales account in his Shermar Corporation in 1929 and 1930. His plan was said to have been legal, since a like scheme, used by William Ewing, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., was approved by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Wiggin paid large personal income taxes in 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1932, he declared. He would not discuss the income tax situation of his personal corporations, one of which was the Shermar, although it was known he used these corporations for most of his market transactions.

The Senate inquiry has stamped Wiggin as one of the greatest operators in Wall street, despite his former reputation as America's leading commercial banker. While directing affairs of the bank, he participated in the syndicate operation of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. in 13 bond and four stock issues.

The inquiry has merely touched upon his direct operations through the personal corporations. The Shermar Corporation, for instance, joined syndicates in General Gas and Electric, Washington Gas and Light, Chicago Traction, American Woolen and Mission Securities stocks or bonds.

His Murlyn Corporation took a third interest in a $10,000,000 deal in Frisco railway stocks.

PRINTERS' HEAD ASSAILS PAPERS

CLEVELAND, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, in an address before the City Club criticized newspaper publishers for the code they presented in Washington and what he termed their fight to retain child labor as newsboys.

In reporting his speech, the Cleveland Plain Dealer said:

"Howard complained his fight on newsboys had not been widely reported, although the Associated Press has carried a comprehensive story."

The paper quoted Howard as saying:

"These publishers stand as the one class which appeared before the National Recovery Administration and refused flatly to do away with child labor as all other industries have done."

FIRM FILES SUIT TO TEST NRA

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Attacking the National Industrial Recovery Act in a controversy over a public works administration building project, the George F. Driscoll Company, construction firm of Brooklyn, N. Y., obtained a temporary injunction today in District of Columbia Supreme Court restraining Secretary of Treasury Woodin from awarding a contract for construction of a postoffice annex in New York.

The plaintiff alleged its bid, $4,246,800, which was the lowest by $112,800, had been protested on the ground of failure to comply with the NRA, and on October 25 the company was notified the bid had been rejected by Woodin.

Counsel for the plaintiff stated that the Brooklyn company had signed the re-employment agreement two days after submitting its bid and that the construction code has not been yet approved by the administration.

jects to be included under the call. It is expected the call may be delayed until after the election on November 7, when Pennsylvania voters will vote upon a $25,000,000 bond issue and other constitutional amendments which will have a bearing upon special session legislation.

Gov. Pinchot will confer with legislative and political leaders Wednesday afternoon.

Two subjects certain of consideration are liquor taxation and control and unemployment relief. Other items expected to be included in the program are educational finances, highway construction, and legislation to enable the state to do work in conjunction with the federal recovery campaign.

Slain Girl's Body Recovered from Bay

PENINSULA, Que., Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Examination of the armless, legless body of Maud Ascah, 15, taken from the waters of Gaspe Bay, today had revealed she had been gagged with a handkerchief and stabbed.

With her cousin, Marguerite Ascah, 17, the girl disappeared from home August 30. Fishermen and police continued dragging the bay, convinced the older girl met a similar fate.

First Lady in Scullery, Avoids Hotel Crowds

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt walked through the dishwashing quarters of a hotel today to avoid crowds and told the 1933 Mobilization For Human Needs Conference that the government, even with her husband at the helm, can't do everything.

The first lady of the land in Chicago two days to see the World's Fair told 100 delegates at the conference that a feeling of helplessness was growing among the needy and unemployed, and that there never before had been so great a need for social welfare work. She said:

"The more relief work you put on government, the more taxes go up. The more those who still have, means to serve, can do with voluntary effort, the better it will be."

The mobilization for human needs Mrs. Roosevelt said she understood, was intended to fill in whatever gaps remain after the federal relief program had been put into effect.

She is director of the women's crusade division of the movement, the division which was concerned chiefly on getting before the public a picture of existing conditions. To the men will be left the actual collection of funds.

Mrs. Roosevelt's arrival was without display. There was no escort from the station to the Congress Hotel, scene of the conference. She entered a service door of the hotel, rode up in a service elevator and walked through the dishwashing room. Kitchen workers stared in amazement as she passed by. She gave them a smile and a cheery "good morning."

Volunteer Mail Carrier Gets Free Ride

Patrolman Frank Goob was thinking how pretty the sun was tinting the fog early this morning when he saw a man approaching him on Eleventh street carrying a bag of mail on his shoulder.

Goob asked:

"What are you doing with that?"

The man slowly let it drop. It was heavy. He replied:

"I'm carrying it."

"Where did you get it?"

"Oh, up on that platform. There's a couple of hundred up there."

He illustrated by pointing to the railroad platform, where the railway mail is dropped.

Black Maria became a mail truck and the man, who said he was Joseph McDermott, 54, of "No home," was to be turned over to federal authorities.

PITT GRAD POISONS LITTLE DAUGHTER, ENDS OWN LIFE

DEATH 'WILLED' TO WIFE AND SECOND GIRL

'Please Follow Us,' Pharmacist's Notes To Family Beg

CLEVELAND, Oct. 30.—A swift acting poison today had claimed the lives of John R. Schoenberg, 40, formerly of Pittsburgh, and his 9-year-old daughter, Mildred.

He gave a poison tablet to the little girl as the two sat in an automobile late yesterday, then swallowed one himself, police reported. He left notes asking that his wife, Mary, and daughter, Shirley, 15, follow them in death.

Schoenberg, a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh School of Pharmacy, was distracted because of financial reverses.

POISON ACTS QUICKLY

The little girl, obeying implicitly her father's request, the authorities believe, took the tablet, as their automobile stood in front of the home of Schoenberg's brother here.

The fatal poison acted immediately. She did not regain consciousness. The father died on the way to a hospital.

In a pocket of Schoenberg's coat was found this note, addressed to his wife, saying:

"Follow us."

Another note read:

"Dear Folks: I am deeply sorry if this action causes you any pain, but there is no other way out. While the past has been bad, Mary and I find the future intolerable."

'PLEASE FOLLOW'

Another note, attached to a check made out to his wife for all the money he had in the bank read:

"I am taking Mildred with me as there is nothing for the children without us. Please follow."

Still another missive was left with the remaining poison tablets. It was meant for his wife, it said:

"Give Shirley one of these capsules and take one yourself."

WORKED HERE

John Schoenberg, known to friends here as "Jack" worked in the drug store of John E. Nichols, 4500 Liberty avenue, for four years following his graduation from the Pitt pharmacy school. He went to Cleveland in 1919. Several months ago he returned here to consider a proposal to open a drug store, it was learned. The plan did not materialize.

'Fired' as Cheerleader

MISS RUTH SCHMELZ . . . ONE OF THREE 'ASKED' TO QUIT

Miss Schmelz, one of three Carnegie Tech co-eds who volunteered, served as cheerleaders at two football games in the stadium—but not at Saturday's W. & J. game after Carnegie Tech's administration asked that their services be discontinued "because of adverse criticism" of the plan. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

CO-ED CHEERING BAN BLAMED FOR TECH TIE

Barring of 3 Girls Broke Spirit, Students Say

Requested to stay off the field by the school administration, Carnegie Tech's trio of co-ed cheerleaders failed to appear at the Tech-W. and J. game in the Stadium, Saturday.

And there are Tech students today who blame that 0-0 tie on the lack of spirit as a result.

The girl yell leaders are Ruth Schmelz, Nancy Freyfoos, and Ida Bickley. Answering inquiries for the reason why Tech official said:

"The girl cheer-leaders had appeared at two games in the Stadium. They volunteered their services at the request of the men cheer-leaders and had performed co-operatively. The girl cheer-leaders were discontinued at the request of the administration because of adverse criticism which came from without as well as within the institution. The unfavorable comment that we received concerned the policy and not the individuals taking part."

Tech's head cheer-leader, A. B. Godshall, has explained that the girl cheer-leaders were a part of his new policy for pepping up Tech school spirit.

DISORDERS BAN SUNDAY GAME

Barring of yesterday's Sunday football game at Central Field, Overbrook, was laid today to former disturbances at the field. Police denied their action was an enforcement of the blue laws.

Lieut. John Vandall, of the South Side precinct, who, with three patrolmen, arrived at the field before game time and instructed the players of the Williams A. C., of Overbrook, and the Marshall Tech team, of the North Side, to call off the contest, said:

"There have been several complaints of fights and disturbances following other Sunday games at Central Field. I received requests to prohibit yesterday's game on those grounds. There was no disorder; we just told both teams the game could not be played, and they left the field."

J. J. McGrath, Republican ward chairman, who lives in the vicinity of the field, saying he had received complaints, continued:

"I have nothing against Sunday football. I'm for Sunday football, and I hope the voters will vote for it in the coming election. However, the games have been noisy at Central Field, and the contests have been marked by frequent fist fights among the fans."

A crowd estimated at 500 was on hand when police banned the game. A score of other Sunday sandlot games were played in the city without interference yesterday.

NEW CLUES HINT OHIO OFFICIAL SHOT WIDOW

Prosecutor Bought Gun Just Before Killing, Police Chief Says

IRONTON, O., Oct. 30.—(AP.)—While physicians strove today to save the life of Lawrence County Prosecutor John Porter, 38, police puzzled over the mystery of who fired the gun which wounded Porter and killed Mrs. Nan Patterson Moreland, pretty 30-year-old widow.

The revelation by Police Chief Dennis Callahan that the pistol used in the double shooting at the woman's apartment Saturday night was purchased by Porter a few minutes before it was fired, and new information from medical examiners led Callahan to believe Porter had fired the shots.

'ONLY ONE SHOT'

Porter himself mumbled to questioners at a hospital that "there was only one shot," but refused to amplify his remark. Surgeons said if he lives he will be blind in at least one eye.

During the early part of their investigation of the double shooting, police were inclined to the belief that Mrs. Moreland had shot Porter and then had turned the gun on herself.

They said Porter, while being rushed to a hospital immediately after the shooting was discovered, had said:

"Nan, why did you do it?"

NEW THEORY

Later examinations, however, disclosed there were severe powder burns about the wound in Porter's forehead, and none about the wound in Mrs. Moreland's temple. This fact, coupled with Porter's purchase of the gun, gave police a new theory of the shootings.

Porter had been preparing evidence for the prosecution of Howard Bartram, charged with slaying Mrs. Moreland's husband, Herman, last July. Police accuse Bartram with slaying Moreland in retaliation for the death of his brother, Stanley Bartram, for whose death Moreland was indicted.

MUMMER THUG SHOOTS VICTIM

FRANKLIN, Pa., Oct. 30.—Wearing a crudely made Hallowe'en mask, a robber who shoved aside Fred Clune, 20, shooting him in the foot, held up Clifford Smith's store in Rockland Township, and forced Charles Ross, 52, clerk, to hand over the cash drawer contents, about $60.

Several hours later, Robert Miller, 19, residing half a mile from the store, was arrested by Sheriff E. M. Vorhees. In his possession, the Sheriff said, was a 45-calibre revolver with one chamber empty. Clune identified Miller as the robber, the Sheriff reported.

When the masked youth entered the store at closing time the clerk and patrons thought he was perpetrating a Halloween prank. Clune was shot when he answered "Why so?" to an order to stand aside. Miller denied the holdup.

Scarlet Fever Sign Protects Police From Thieves

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Scarlet fever—that was what the sign said that hung on the door of the Suburban Berkeley Police Station today, but it didn't mean anything.

To a motorist who wanted to report an automobile accident, but who hesitated to enter the station for fear he might be quarantined, Chief of Police Edward Murray offered the following explanation over the telephone:

"You see, we've moved the police station to the village hall and we put up the scarlet fever sign to keep anyone from breaking into the old station until we get the flies and equipment removed."

GRAF DODGES SEA STORMS

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—The Graf Zeppelin, homeward bound over the Atlantic, after her visit to the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, reported her position at 10 p. m. (E. S. T.) last night to the Radio Marine Corporation at Lat. 39:39 north, Long. 44:10 west, which would place her about 2,000 miles east of New York. No word had been received from her early today.

HAMBURG, Germany, Oct. 29.—(AP.)—The local meteorological station reported tonight the Graf Zeppelin, en route from the United States to Spain and Germany, changed her course Sunday morning from east to north because of eastern gales over the Azores.

The Graf's position at 4 p. m. local time (10 a. m. Eastern Standard Time) was reported as 40 degrees north latitude and 53 degrees 5 minutes west longitude (about one-third of the distance across on an almost direct line between New York and Madrid, Spain.

She reported "all well."

LINDY RETURNS TO LE BOURGET

PARIS, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh revisited with his wife today the scene of his first taste of world fame.

They motored to Le Bourget Field this morning, where the "Lone Eagle" showed Mrs. Lindbergh the tablet-marked spot where he landed six years ago, completing a solo trans-Atlantic hop amidst a throng of Frenchmen wild with admiration.

The trip to the airfield followed a visit to Mme. Painleve in which Lindbergh expressed his personal sorrow at the death of her husband, who as war minister in the Poincare cabinet received the flier at the time of his historic first arrival.

seats, broke electric bulbs and caused damage estimated. Police Capt. John Schnurr said, at $1,000.

HEAVY BOND SET

The girl, Margaret Wilson, 18, of 5866 Bartlett street, Schnurr said, had no part in the rowdyism. She was held under $15 bail, charged with violating a cityt ordinance, while the 21 youths were held on suspicious person charges, with $1,000 bond each set by Schnurr.

Special police balked the efforts of the collegiates to enter the Penn, Stanley, and other theaters. Schnurr warned any further destruction of property would mean a stiff police and court action.

Mayoralty Candidate William N. McNair was halted by some of his student admirers at Liberty avenue and Sixth street. The students surrounded him. He warned them to behave, and advised they go home and study economics.

Among the leaders of the parade were John Holbrook, whose father is one of the deans at the university, and John Bracken, leader of ODK, student activities group.

When the students attempted to crash the Warner Theater and jammed traffic at Smithfield and Fifth avenue, the management offered to admit the students upon payment of children's admission. About 50 took advantage of the offer. The other moved on. Two or three were arrested.

MARCH ON TECH

The celebration fever germinated early today, supposedly with freshmen, on the University of Pittsburgh campus. One group moved over to the Carnegie Tech campus, a violation of student council agreement, where they cheered and yelled. Tech beat Notre Dame the previous Saturday, 7 to 0.

The school authorities had ordered professors to stay at their posts, refusing a holiday.

The second division moved towards the downtown, deflecting to pay their respects on the Duquesne University campus on the bluff.

One Duquesne student, watching the demonstration, thoughtfully said:

"Wait till we play them."

Reaching downtown, about 25 automobile loads halted, here and there to pick up a sidewalk flag or NRA sign. Police forced them to put them back. Two patrol auto loads of blue coats met them at the various theaters. They booed the police as the ringleaders were arrested.

GROUP ARRESTED

The men arrested said they were:

Ben Byers, 20, 1609 Hillsdale street; William Huston, 18, 1404 Federal street; R. D. Rowley, 18, 726 Wills street; James Shields, 18, 1256 Wisconsin avenue; William Hunter, 18, of 421 South Pasific avenue; Elliott Montroll, 17, 1724 Hillsdale street; J. Sing Sing's Grid Team Nifty Outfit, Egan Says

Judge John P. Egan, leading football referee, sat on the bench in Common Pleas Court today, reflecting, between lawyers' arguments, that the Black Sheep is a nifty football outfit, with some real all-American material on it.

The Black Sheep, if you didn't know until now, is Sing Sing's football team, which, yesterday, won its sixth straight game. Like no other team, all its games have been home game.

Judge Egan officiated, stopping off after refereeing Saturday's Yale-Army game in New Haven. Listen to the Judge:

"They beat the Peekskill N. Y. S. team, 26 to 0. It was a splendid game, one of the cleanest I ever saw. The Black Sheep used the Notre Dame system.

"There wasn't a decision for unnecessary roughness. And what football players!

"That Moon Byrd, 195-pound back, a big colored boy, would shine on any team. And Alabama Pitts and Lucky Eiseman—they would be stars anywhere.

"Most thrilling to me was to see the convicts march in.

"The Peekskill band played 'Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?'

"And Warden Dawes had as his guest, in a box, an 'A' prisoner.

"You never heard a more enthusiastic crowd."

Tea King Host to Pals Of Boyhood at Fair

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 30.—(AP.)—As Frank Ross and his chums splashed about in the "ole swimmin' hole" in Wheeling Creek years ago, they used to say:

"If I had a million dollars, I'd—"

And now one of Frank Ross' boyhood wishes is coming true.

Wealthy executive of a Chicago tea company, Ross is entertaining at the World's Fair this week 10 of the "boys" with whom he played as a child in the nearby village of Wind Ridge.

The Wind Ridge group, all businessmen of this section, left last night for Chicago, where they plan to recall with Ross their boyhood visits to the Greene County Indian graves and battlefields and the little red schoolhouse they all attended.

After leaving Wind Ridge, Ross became a railroad employe in Claysville, Pa., and then went to Chicago, where he rose gradually as a tea tycoon.

He is paying all the bills for the "Wind Ridge junket" to the fair.

E. H. SOTHERN, NOTED ACTOR, DIES AT 73

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—The last rites for E. H. Sothern, who devoted a lifetime to audiences, will be performed without one.

Broadway celebrities anxious to do honor to the memory of the street's great romantic actor would have filled Manhattan's largest church, but Julia Marlowe has decreed otherwise.

After the news of the 73-year-old actor's death from pneumonia on Saturday was made known yesterday, his wife announced that the services would be private, attended only by herself and intimate friends. Even the time and place of the funeral was withheld. The body will be cremated.

When Sothern retired in 1930 he brought to a close a stage career of half a century. He had started life as a painter and became the best-known Shakesperian actor of his time.

SUCCESS ASSURED

He was born in New Orleans on December 6, 1859, the son of an English actor, Edwin Askew Sothern. His father determined that Sothern should be a painter, and educated him accordingly. But the boy succumbed to the footlight lure in his blood. Success was assured when in 1885 Daniel Frohman asked him to join his famous Lyceum Company as leading man.

By the time he turned to Shakespeare in 1900 he was already a tradition of the stage. In that year he played Hamlet with success both in New York and on the road. The next season he created his famous role of Francois Villon in "If I Were King." During the next quarter of a century it remained perhaps his most successful vehicle. Another was "The Prisoner of Zenda."

WEDS JULIA MARLOWE

In 1904 he formed the famous partnership with Julia Marlowe. They played together until 1907, including a season in London. In 1910 Sothern and his first wife, Virginia Harned, were divorced and he married Miss Marlowe. In 1913 they announced their retirement, migrated to England and bought a home.

But the lure of the stage was too strong. They returned to it together again and again. Finally, Miss Marlowe did retire in 1924, but Sothern appeared until 1930, when a heart attack finally forced him to end his brilliant career. His reminiscences, "The Melancholy Tales of Me," were published in 1917. He was also the author of several plays.

Mr. Sothern and his wife, Miss Marlowe, were frequent visitors to Pittsburgh stages. On one of their last visits, a half dozen or more years ago, Miss Marlowe suffered a leg injury during a performance at the Alvin Theater and was forced to retire.

WILSON FAVORS LETTING WETS 'HANG SELVES'

When the United States turns thumbs down on prohibition the drys are going to give the wets "enough rope to hang themselves," according to Dr. Clarence True Wilson, militant leader of the dry forces.

The general secretary of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church last night at the South Avenue Methodist Church told an audience of 700 persons:

"We will not admit defeat until the 36 states have voted for repeal. However, if prohibition is repealed we are willing to allow the wets to control the liquor traffic as they did not let us do under prohibition. In other words, we are going to give them enough rope to hang themselves."

PLANS HARDER FIGHT

Gov. Pinchot can admit repeal if he wants to, Dr. Wilson said, but the dry leader announced he himself is going to fight a "bigger, better fight." To win back prohibition the Methodist Board is going to carry out for two years the "most tremendous campaign of publicity ever launched."

Text books telling of the effect of alcohol on the human system, he said, will be installed in every college and university. The drys, he declared, will use pageants, movies, books, pamphlets, magazines, lantern slides and speakers.

PAINTS DIRE RESULTS

Dr. Wilson, telling what he believes would follow repeal, said:

"You again will see fathers stealing the baby's shoes to buy booze and pawning the children's school books to get another drink. You will see the house of shame and gambling hell come back with the saloon."

Col. Frank B. Ebbert, counselor of the Methodist Board, also spoke, asserting there is a "fighting chance" to prevent repeal.

M'CLURE URGED GAMBLING 'FIX,' RAIDER SAYS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—D. Harvey Dykes, on the witness stand for his sixth day of direct examination, testified in the Delaware County liquor conspiracy case today that he "fixed" a gambling raid at the request of State Senator John J. McClure.

District Attorney William J. MacCarter, Jr., said that "anything I did would be all right with him," Sykes asserted in connection with the "fixing."

The witness also named Max (Boo Boo) Hoff, of Philadelphia, as the man who paid him $100 a week to protect the "numbers racket" in Delaware County. He said the payments continued "clean up until I went to jail."

Sykes, a former constable sentenced to six years on an extortion charge, is coming to court daily in the custody of a guard. He started his term in January, 1931.

HOFF PAYS

Senator McClure is one of 75 men being tried on charges of participating in a "protection" organization for liquor law violators. The government alleges that the organization, reputedly led by McClure, levied vast sums of tribute money on bootleggers and speakeasy operators paying police officers for "protecting" them.

Sykes said he explained to McClure that he had turned the equipment taken in the gambling raid over to the prosecutor and he was afraid MacCarter would "ride" him if he stopped the case. Later, he testified, the District Attorney said he was agreeable and the case ended with the four defendants paying $25 fines.

It was after this that Hoff arranged the monthly payments.

Charles Schwartz, another defendant, was quoted by the witness as having told him (Sykes) that he had been taken to the office of Mervyn Turk, Chester attorney, and told a liquor case could be settled for $200. Sykes testified he told Schwartz not to pay, but to "threaten to squawk." Schwartz settling or $200.

Sykes, who on Saturday added murder to the crimes charged against participants in the alleged organization, said Joe Doblitz, a defendant, had seen "taken for a ride." He did not reveal how Doblitz escaped death and the alleged speakeasy operator just smiled.

VICE RAID HALTED

Eugene F. White, chief clerk of the House of Representatives, was accused by the witness of paying him $40 to stop a raid on a disorderly house.

"That's one of the best paying places we have," he quoted White, one of the 75, as saying.

CHOOSE SCHOOL DANCE MENTOR

Miss Bettie Mathias, 22-year-old Carrick girl, has been selected from a number of applicants, as dancing instructor of the Brentwood schools. The dancing school, to be conducted under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association, will open next Saturday at the Elroy School, Elroy street and Francis avenue, Brentwood. Three hundred school children from first grade through high school are expected to attend.

POSTAL LIQUOR AD BAN UPHELD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Repeal or no repeal, the Reed amendment will not allow the Postoffice Department to accept liquor advertisements addressed to persons in dry states.

The Postoffice Department made that clear yesterday in a statement based on a ruling of the Department of Justice.

Recent publication of liquor advertisements in expectation of repeal raised the question which resulted in the ruling.

The Department of Justice was quoted as stating that the Reed amendment, prohibiting the use of the mails for advertisement of intoxicating liquors or the solicitation of orders for such liquors in prohibition states, was not affected by "the so-called beer act of March 22, 1933," and would not be affected in the event of repeal.

ARSON CHARGE HOLDS GROCER

Accused of setting a fire which destroyed his grocery at 6 Third avenue, Carnegie, on August 11, August Messineo, 40, of 302 Chestnut street, Carnegie, was held for court on a charge of arson by Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan today.

County Detective Peter Connors, who investigated the fire, charged that he had found remnants of fire crackers, fuses and some cans of oil and gasoline in the ruins.

Connors said Messineo had disappeared from home the day after the fire. He returned to Carnegie Saturday and was arrested.

Distillery Permit Delayed for Inquiry

HARRISBURG, Oct. 30.—(INS.)—Further investigation of the Pennsylvania Distilleries Company, Logansport, is necessary, Gov. Gifford Pinchot said today, before the State Alcohol Permit Board will issue a permit to it for the manufacture of liquor.

After withdrawing its original application, the distillery filed a new application seeking authority to manufacture liquor in this state. The application was signed by Morris Weiner, Irwin Weiner and Joseph Steinman.

PINCHOT LIQUOR STAND SCORED

STROUDSBURG, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today was accused by President Judge Samuel E. Shull, of the Monroe and Pike County courts, of an assault on the "integrity of the judiciary" in his recent criticism of the Brooks high license law.

The jurist challenged Gov. Pinchot in a statement to point to a single instance "in this district" where a judge ever had been "dragged into liquor politics." He said:

"As a member of the judiciary of Pennsylvania who was on the bench prior to prohibition and while the Brooks law was in force, I would forfeit my self-respect should I remain silent in face of the aspersions Gov. Pinchot saw fit to cast upon the courts of this commonwealth last Friday in which he said 'the iniquitous Brooks high license law, which dragged our courts into liquor politics, must not return.'"

Judge Shull, a prominent Democrat, a former candidate for Governor and the party's nominee for United States Senator in 1922, declared that as to the Governor's statement that "liquor must be kept out of politics," that was "just as possible as enforcing prohibition."

$4,000,000 Liquor Plant to Hire 1,000

KITTANNING, Pa., Oct. 30.—(INS.)—Construction of the new Joseph S. Finch Company distillery at Schenley, near here, reported to involve an expenditure of approximately $4,000,000 and expected to give employment to hundreds when ready for operation, was progressing rapidly today.

A force of 650 men and women are at work in the district plant of the Finch firm, and prospects are that when present construction is done the payroll will carry 1,000 persons.

LUKS, ARTIST, FOUND DEAD IN DOORWAY

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—In a darkened doorway on Sixth avenue lay the huddled figure of a man.

A policeman patrolling the windswept street, stirred it roughly with his nightstick. Then he called an ambulance.

Thus, as unconventionally as he had lived, died George Benjamin Luks, internationally acclaimed as one of America's foremost artists.

Luks, who was 66, succumbed to a heart attack as he watched the effect of sunrise on the elevated structure. He had been prowling about in the early hours, as was his custom in seeking subjects for pictures.

FOLLOWS HENRI, BELLOWS

Funeral services for the painter, last of the triumvirate composed of Robert Henri, George Bellows and Luks, which founded a new school of painting in America, will be held here tomorrow night. The body will be sent to Royersford, Pa., for burial. He was born in Williamsport, Pa., in 1867.

During the Spanish-American war, the Philadelphia Bulletin sent Luks to Cuba as a war correspondent and there he was arrested four times because he insisted on being a soldier as well as a correspondent.

Luks' style was vigorous and incisive, his subjects drawn preferably from what more academic painters delicately termed "lower types." He boasted he knew more "tough characters and joints" than anyone in New York.

He detested "arty painters and arty pictures," boasting he "could paint with a shoestring dipped in ink."

ART JUDGE IN 1927

In Pittsburgh in 1927 outspoken Mr. Luks, here to judge the annual exhibit of the Associated Artists, created a one-day sensation when he asserted that half of the so-called masters' paintings in Pittsburgh mansions were fakes. He applied the same percentage to other cities, too. He urged:

"Buy paintings because you know they are refreshing, vital. Don't be fooled like these Mr. Bimbos, who have cornered wheat and iron and groceries and mush and all that; who go to New York and pay $20,000 or $100,000 for something that some ingenious one says was done by Giotto or Botticelli."

One of Luks' paintings is hanging in the current International show at Carnegie Institute. It is "7 East Twenty-second Street."

Miss Virginia Cuthbert, of 419 Meadowcroft avenue, Mt. Lebanon, posed for one of the figures in the painting while she was a member of Luks' classes in New York, Carnegie Institute authorities said.

Others expected to speak are Otto F. Messner, state department commander; George E. Grimm, county commander; Attorney John B. Nichlas, Jr., Thirty-sixth District commander, and Attorney Charles E. Lane, past county commander.

Drum and bugle corps from Tarentum, New Kensington and Greensburg will attend.

State Legion Chief Urges Bonus Fight

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Otto F. Messner, of Lancaster, state commander of the American Legion, urges that uniformed members be at the polls in the November election to work for passage of the amendment authorizing $50,000,000 for veterans.

Messner asked that this be done in an address to members of the Legion executive committee. He also asked support of Sunday sports and prohibition repeal in the election.

He was promoted to a lieutenancy 11 years ago, serving most of the time in South Side police districts. In July he was transferred to the Center avenue police district.

FEDERAL JURY OPENS NAZI PROBE

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—A federal grand jury opened its inquiry today into the status and activities of Heinz Spanknoebel, reputed Nazi propagandist chief who disappeared last week, with information that he was still in the United States but preparing to flee to Germany.

Dr. Ignatz T. Griebel, president of the League of Friends of New Germany, brought to United States Attorney George Z. Medalie a letter from Spanknoebel dated yesterday, in which Spanknoebel said:

"I am going to leave the United States somewhere."

An order for the arrest of the missing Nazi on a charge of acting as an official representative of the German government without diplomatic recognition through the State Department was issued Friday by Medalie.

Griebel, who holds a commission as a surgeon in the United States Army Reserve Corps, was one of several prominent German-Americans to go before the federal grand jury.

Others were Bernard and Victor Ridder, publishers of the Staats-Zeitung, who told the federal attorney that Spanknoebel sought to establish a censorship of their papers after showing credentials from Berlin; Carl Nicolai, president of the United German Societies, Hans Hollerbusch and Hans Kleinschmidt.

In his letter, Spanknoebel denied he was ever "politically engaged," said that he was not a "paid agent of Germany," and that "it was never my intention to spread anti-Semitic propaganda."

The problem of Jewish refugees from Germany and participation of the United States in relief work for them will be discussed tonight by Rabbi Wolf Gold, president of the Mizrachi Zionist Organization of America, in Adath Jeshuran Synagogue, Margaretta and North St. Clair streets.

Reich Fire Witness Accused of Perjury

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—(INS.)—Herr Soehnke, a witness before the German Supreme Court in the trial of five men accused of firing the Reichstag Building, was arrested today on a charge of perjury.

Westwood Trial Meets New Delay

Resumption of the trial of James J. Westwood, McKees Rocks justice of the peace, and his constables, William A. Meissner and Tim Drexler, on charges of defrauding the county through bogus trials, was postponed today because of the illness of their attorney, A. M. Oliver.

The trial was halted October 20, when they asked for a judgment on the whole record after jury tampering had been charged and a juror withdrawn.

Lupe and Weissmuller Admit Secret Marriage

'It's My Business, Anyway,' Mexican Actress Says

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Lupe Velez, Mexican actress, and Johnny Weismuller, tarzan of the screen, admitting they have been married since October 8, said today the reason they kept their marriage a secret was to give "a little girl a break."

The "little girl" was the writer of a film fan magazine, a friend of the film couple, who accompanied the actress and actor to Las Vegas, Nev., last October 8.

Miss Velez said:

"It was my own business. I felt like saying I wasn't married and now I feel like saying I am married."

In Las Vegas, Justice of the Peace Frank M. Ryan, who previously denied he had married the couple, admitted he had performed the ceremony.

It was the champion swimmer's second marriage. Three days before his wedding to the fiery little actress, he was divorced from Bobbe Arnst, musical comedy star.

Miss Velez had consistently denied she might marry the former swimming monarch from the time their names were first linked, while she was appearing in vaudeville in New York, until the day of Weissmuller's divorce.

Broker, Son of Coal Operator, Ends Life

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—William T. Mann, 33, Washington broker, was found dead yesterday at his home here of a bullet wound. Police said he had suffered financial reverses.

Mann, socially prominent in Washington, was a son of the late Isaac T. Mann, a leading West Virginia coal operator.

Coolidge Son's Baby To Be Called Cynthia

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Cynthia was chosen today by John and Florence Trumbull Coolidge as the name for their two-day old daughter.

Little Cynthia Coolidge was named after an aunt of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, widow of the former President.

The name of the baby, born Saturday to the son of the former President and the daughter of a former Connecticut Governor, was chosen to retain the initials "C. C." of the Coolidge family.

If a son had been born, young Coolidge said, he would have been named Calvin Coolidge.

The mother was reported "in very good condition" and the baby "just fine."

Mr. and Mrs. John Coolidge were married September 23, 1929, in Plainville.

LITVINOFF AT PARIS, ENDS MYSTERY

PARIS, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Abruptly bringing to an end the mystery which had surrounded his movements for hours, Maxim Litvinoff, Russian Foreign Commissar, arrived here today en route to the United States.

He was reported to have left Berlin for Paris yesterday, but he did not arrive on the train he was believed to have taken.

His plans for sailing to the United States, where he is to confer with President Roosevelt regarding possible American recognition of Russia, remained veiled in secrecy.

He made no appointments here, but it was said he might see Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour, and associates pointed out he would have to get a visa to go on to the United States.

U. S. PREPARED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Virtual completion of a formula for President Roosevelt's recognition discussions with Maxim Litvinoff, of Russia, was revealed today by Washington authorities.

Although State Department officials guarded the exact course to be followed by the Chief Executive in his meeting with the Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, no secret was made of the fact that there had been a final roundup of data for the conversations.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Hull remained silent upon Litvinoff's assertion that so far as he was concerned the matter could be settled in half an hour.

'EXPLORATION'

It was known, however, that the President planned to take considerably longer for what he termed the move to "explore" in across-the-table fashion "all questions outstanding between our countries."

In the discussions, expected here to start early next week, it is Mr. Roosevelt's intention to hit only the high spots with Litvinoff and leave details to assistants.

Secretary Hull, who postponed for a week his trip to South America, will have a hand in this work, as will R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, and William C. Bullitt, special assistant to the Secretary of State.

CUBAN STRIKE FORECAST

HAVANA, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Three more bombs exploded early today in a continuation of labor troubles which leaders predicted would culminate at midnight in a general strike.

Two of the bombs exploded under trams in suburban Luyano and another slightly damaged the printing establishment of Rambla & Souza, formerly printers of the official gazette published during the regime of the deposed president, Gerardo Machado.

Bouza is a large stockholder in Diario de la Marina and at present is acting as printer foreman there to enable the paper to publish during the strike of mechanical men.

Edward Garey, 60, former vice president and secretary of the M. O'Herron Company, Pittsburgh contractors, was killed at Dushore, Pa., late yesterday by the accidental discharge of a rifle he was cleaning preparatory to starting on a hunting trip.

Mr. Garey retired from the contracting firm several years ago and returned to his former home in Dushore. He recently supervised work in the C. C. C. camp at Laporte. Blind Parents Find New Happiness in Baby Girl

'Only Wish I Could See Her,' Says Mother

A baby girl born 11 days ago in West Penn Hospital, today is bringing "a new blessed happiness" to a Hazelwood married couple, both of whom are blind.

According to Miss Louise Hardte, head of the hospital's obstetrical department, the seven-pound, seven-ounce girl is the first baby in the hospital's records to have a blind mother and father.

She is Thelma Lynne Warden, just as pretty and healthy as any baby. Her mother, Mrs. Earl Warden, blind since she was 13 years old, said:

"The baby brought my husband and me a new blessed happiness. I only wish that I could see her. The nurses told me that she is very pretty."

The father of the child became blind by accident when a young man. He operates many vending machines throughout the city and travels from one to the other taking care of them alone.

The Wardens live at 226 Tipton street.

WAR PREMIER OF FRANCE DIES

PARIS, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—France prepared a national funeral today for one of its illustrious statesmen, Paul Painleve, who died yesterday of the same malady that forced him out of public affairs—heart disease. He was 70.

He died within 24 hours after President Albert Lebrun had dedicated Saturday the new "Painleve amphitheater," conservatory of arts and trades.

Today plans were made for the body to lay in state there until a national funeral, set for November 4, is tendered. Burial probably will be in the Pantheon.

Scholar, diplomat and statesman, he also found time to ride hard a hobby which interested him early—aviation. In 1908, he was Wilbur Wright's first passenger in France.

He was premier of France in 1917 and in 1925, and served for a time as war minister during the world conflict.

Auto Crash Victim Dies of Injuries

Robert E. Clark, 24, of 2927 Mattern avenue, Dormont, who was rescued from his blazing automobile after a collision with a truck Saturday, died early today in South Side Hospital as the result of a fractured skull.

The accident occurred at West Liberty and Cape May avenues. Frank Dischman, of near Crafton, alleged driver of the truck, is being held under $1,000 bond for an inquest.

NEW HIT-RUN TRIAL REFUSED

Two motorists, accused of paying a Juvenile Court ward a dime to forget his injuries after an accident and found guilty of failing to render assistance, were refused a new trial today in Criminal Court.

The defendants, Harry Harris, 40, of 1844 Webster avenue, and Israel Goodman, 42, of 3615 Beechwood boulevard, were ordered to appear before the court Wednesday for sentence.

The new trial was refused after arguments were heard by Judges Ralph H. Smith, J. Frank Graff and Elder W. Marshall.

Claude McGuire, 12, victim of the accident, was a ward of the court and lived at 4426 Penn avenue. He suffered cuts and bruises when struck by an automobile in which Harris and Goodman were riding on the night of March 22 at Friendship and Penn avenues.

EGYPT REFUSES ENTRY TO JEWS

PORT SAID, Egypt, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—The Egyptian government refused permission today to 900 Jews—mostly Poles—who were seeking to land.

They were bound for Jaffa from Constanza aboard the Danish steamer Polonia, which was diverted here on instructions from authorities in Palestine.

Jaffa has been the scene of turbulent rioting in connection with Arab protests against increasing Jewish immigration.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Three Arabs wounded in anti-Jewish rioting Sunday died today, making the known dead among the Arabs in the current disorders at least 30. More than 200 have been wounded.

The general strike continued here today, but otherwise the city was quiet. Trouble was expected at Haifa and at Nablus.

Arabians Invade Wahabi Kingdom

JIDDAH, Arabia, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Seeking a big slice of the territory of Ibn Saud, king of the Arabian Saudian kingdom (formerly known as the Hedjaz and Nejd), Imam Yahya, of the Yemen, a state in Southwest Arabia, has launched an offensive in the Najran district and after serious fighting has occupied Vadar, said an official announcement today.

The announcement said Ibn Saud had named Emir Fessal to defend the southern frontier of the Wahabi kingdom.

"No Retailer"

—says the Code signed by President Roosevelt, and effective starting TO-DAY, "no retailer shall use advertising, whether printed, radio or display, or of any other nature, which is inaccurate in ANY material particular or misrepresents merchandise."

There it is at last—IN THE CODE—as legal and official as sunrise and sunset—and we hope it always will be.

The Code as adopted will not mean changing a single policy at 624 Liberty. Like Mae West, we're not angels, but, by the eternal gods, WHY SHOULD any merchant WANT to confuse the public when by putting his cards on the table, and speaking out FACTS, he can make FRIENDS of his public and do a LOT more business? Well, it all works out in the end, doesn't it—even if it does take Uncle Sam and a national exigency to work it out. And now that lying is old hat, the smart public will sit back and watch for the appearance of the Truth, Truth unadorned—save for the halo bestowed by Cousin NIRA. Meanwhile, life will go on as before, where Liberty crosses Oliver—and more and more people will recognize the wisdom of having a charge account here—where you may take months instead of four weeks, or eight or twelve—and don't need to pay a single cent more than our REGULAR CASH PRICES. By the way,

If YOU Have the Job, We Have the Charge All Ready

Just give us your name, where employed and a reference or two—then we'll do business—not next week—not next month—but NOW.

Is a Honeymoon Good Start Toward Happiness?

Do honeymoons pay?

Are they the best start-off for marriage?

Or are they apt to give romance a permanent pain-in-the-neck?

Not long ago, Mary Borden wrote a book called "The Technique of Marriage." And what Mary said about honeymoons was Just-Too-Bad!

Young couples, according to her, don't go honeymooning because they think it is romantic or because they honestly want to, but because it is expected of them—because it's "the thing to do," and the friends would think it terrible if they didn't.

And, she insists, far from giving their marriage a fine start toward understanding and real comradeship and happiness, the average honeymoon is liable to gum it up for keeps.

Why?

To her, it is simple. Two young people have decided to join forces, to enter a partnership. Two young people with different habits, different temperaments, different ways of doing things. If they're going to be happy they must learn to really know each other; to become adjusted to each other; and to do that they need to be by themselves in some quiet place, with nothing to throw sand in the gears.

HONEYMOON DISAPPROVED

"And what chance do they have," she asks, "going from the excitement and fuss and nervous strain of the average fussy wedding, into the weariness of hosting trains and noisy sight-seeing and strange hotels?"

"A fine chance," she answers, "of getting on each other's nerves, irritating each other because they're tired and abnormally keyed up—and losing forever whatever understanding and compatibility they might have found."

So she announces that she is Thumbs Down on gadding for newlyweds. And her recipe for beginning a marriage is: No Strange Places, Sights or People—and that young folks should go quietly to their own new home, and learn to really know each other, before they face the world.

READERS DISAGREED

Whereat, about 889,865 Sentimental Citizens rose up to tell her in horrified tones that she was crazy.

"Give up the most romantic vacation of our lives?" they cried. "Settle down to commonplace living at home, right off the bat? Unthinkable!"

What's your notion about it?

Let's have your own story.

What did your honeymoon mean to your marriage?

Was it the Beautiful Pilgrimage that folks pictured it? Did you come home happier for it? Did you come home understanding each other better, adjusted to each other more completely? Did it start your marriage off in a glow of happy glamor?

Or did you come home tired, out of sorts, irritated with each other, and wondering if maybe your marriage wasn't a mistake?

And would things have been brighter if you had cut out the traveling and tucked yourselves away, just you two, by your own restful hearth?

Come on—'fess up!

Fay King Emphasizes Importance of Training Young Girls

By FAY KING

Little girls are very sweet and very important future citizens. Little girls will grow up to be the home makers and mothers of the future. From a good mother, little girls will learn to be gentle and neat.

No matter how clever a little girl may be, and perhaps have a career instead of home, husband and children, I have yet to meet a successful woman who was not at heart a home maker.

Every little girl is innately gentle and graceful, and mothers should guide little daughters to improve in those qualities. One cannot begin too early to teach them to be more quiet of voice and manner, even at play. For when they grow a little older, this will be a great help to them.

Veritzen Clears the Way for an Interview

Philip Veritzen would need all his histrionism, I told myself, if he succeeded in changing my mother-in-law's decision not to play cribbage with my father because it would be discourteous to him as a guest.

"Dear lady," he said, "do you know you are depriving me of a great pleasure by this refusal? I am intensely interested in cribbage, and I play it a little, though, of course, I am not in your class or Mr. Spencer's. But ever since my last visit here, I have been promising myself the pleasure of again watching a game between you.

"I tell you frankly, I want to watch your game very closely, in the hope that when I play with you—and I shall beg that honor when my game improves—I shall be able to know something of your strength and weaknesses; though I doubt if you have any of the latter."

Mother Graham flushed with pleasure. He had found the heel of Achilles, and the battle was his. I knew it, even before she spoke.

"You ought to be ashamed to flatter an old woman so unconscionably," she said. "You should save such pretty speeches for the younger women."

LILLIAN AMUSED

"They would be wasted," he assured her, with another bow. "But won't you believe that they are not merely pretty speeches—that I am really sincere in my desire to see a game between you two?"

"W—e—ll," she said slowly, it seems a most discourteous thing to do, but if you really wish it, I have no objection to playing on one condition. When we have finished, you are to give me a game. You are far too modest when you speak of waiting until your game improves. No doubt you can beat me right now."

Lillian, standing next me, and listening as eagerly as I to the colloquy, nudged me delightedly.

"The darling old humbug," she murmured from the side of her mouth, in the fashion we both learned during our secret service work in the World War. "That would be a smirk on the face of a less perfect lady. She knows she can beat coat and trousers offen dear Philip, but she's pretending humility. But oh, boy! How he baited that hook!"

"And how she swallowed it!" I murmured, jubilant at Mr. Veritzen's success, although I was beginning to be dubious lest Mother Graham might be so interested in the prospective game with Mr. Veritzen that she would miss him when he slipped away for his interview with Noel, Mary and me.

"Will you stand ready to throw yourself into the breach if necessary?" I asked, still in the same undertone.

"To the death," she answered. "Name and deed."

"When Mr. Veritzen sees that she is engrossed in the game, he will slip away," I told her. "Will you stand ready to tell her, if she notices his absence, that Noel asked to see him about something?"

"Sure thing," she assented. "But that won't explain your absence."

HOPE FOR BEST

"Let us hope for the best," I said pessimistically, as my mother-in-law rose from her chair and, attended devotedly by my father and Mr. Veritzen moved toward the cribbage table.

"Queen Victoria, knowing that a chair would always be in place behind her, so that she did not need to turn her head, had nothing on your mother-in-law," Lillian commented, as she watched the older woman's stately progress down the room. "She just knows everybody is going to dance attendance upon her, and accepts it as a matter of course. Let's move up a little and watch the first act of the drama."

"I think I'd better keep out of the picture," I told her. "I'll get hold of Noel and Mary and see that they are in the library, so that there won't be any delay when Mr. Veritzen gets a chance to slip away. When you get the chance, tell him where they are. I'll hover around in the offing, being careful that Mother Graham doesn't get a glimpse of me."

"Aye, aye, Skipper," Lillian said, with a gamin-like grin. "I'll do as pretty a job of swabbing the decks as you would like to see."

Contract Bridge

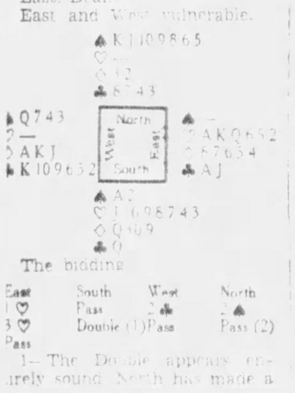
HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Doubling with Trump Strength

The mere fact that an adversary of the Declarer holds four certain trump tricks does not necessarily guarantee the defeat of a contract, even when, in addition to the four certain tricks, the player holds the Ace of a suit that has been bid by his partner, as Mr. Ralph Brewster, of Elizabeth, N. J., learned to his sorrow in a recent Rubber game in which, with four sure trump tricks in the adverse bid suit, he cashed no other tricks whatever and thus what appeared to him to give promise of being an unusual penalty resulted in a fulfilled contract and a rubber for vulnerable opponents. Freakish hands are laws unto themselves. When one or more players hold voids, it is well for all of the players to look out for distributional storms calculated to wreck the best laid plans of the most careful player. Usually it is the declaring side that feels most severely the impact of such distributional freaks, but in the particular instance recorded below it was the defending player who found five apparently certain tricks, with prospects for more, melt down to the minimum represented by his trump strength.

East, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	— ♠
3 ♡	Double (1)	Pass	Pass (2)
Pass

1—The Double appears entirely sound. North has made a bid. South holds the Ace of North's suit as well as a minimum of four trump-tricks with at least a possibility of a trick in diamonds in addition. 2—It is extremely questionable if North should have left the Double in. His hand has no trick possibilities whatever in hearts, diamonds or clubs. On the other hand, it would appear that with his partner's Double there is a fair chance of taking a minimum of seven tricks and perhaps more with the combined hands. The other side of the picture was the fact that being void of the suit doubled by his partner he felt that the prospect of a penalty was thereby enhanced.

There is very little to the play of the hand. South opened the spade Ace, which East ruffed. The only possibility of losing more than four tricks was that the diamond finesse would not succeed. As a matter of fact, even this situation was taken care of by the clubs, and what appeared superficially to be a very heavy set resulted instead in a made contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

When an adversary has revoked and I discover it on the next trick, am I forced to take a two-trick penalty and let the revoke stand even though in the end I will lose three tricks by it?

Answer—You should never be allowed to suffer because a revoke has been made. You are allowed to call back the previous trick and make the offender play a correct card. In that case you may call the card played in error an exposed card or make the offender play his highest or lowest of the correct suit to the previous trick.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Importance of Correct Posture for the Child

It is only within recent years that medical and school authorities have realized the importance of correct posture for the growing child. Repeated experiments and intensive study have confirmed the theory that improper posture leads to many constitutional disturbances.

Dr. Copeland

For example, in a recent investigation it was found that many children suffering from malnutrition and undernourishment also suffered from faulty posture. When the posture was corrected digestive disturbances disappeared. Almost immediately the children developed better appetites and gained weight.

Of course, poor posture may be traced to some defect in the bony framework of the body. Then correction is possible only when the cause is determined and corrected. This can be accomplished by a complete and careful physical examination of the child.

In this examination attention is given to the spine, to the hips, knees and foot arches. General diseases which produce bony deformities, such as rickets, tuberculosis, and glandular disturbances, are other causes of poor posture and, of course, will not be overlooked by the physician.

I am glad to say that most schools now teach the importance and health value of proper posture. Postural exercises are a daily part of school work. Those pupils who require exercises for the correction of certain defects are placed in special groups. Naturally, these exercises are of no value if the child does not continue to follow the instructions while at home and away from school. Every parent should co-operate with the school authorities in encouraging proper posture in the child.

Proper posture is just as important for the adult members of the family. Bear in mind that many minor disturbances, such as headache, nausea, "biliousness," loss of appetite, and backache, are often traced to faulty posture.

Encourage the child to walk in an erect position, with the chest well arched forward, stomach in, head upright. Correct the child when he walks slumped forward, with shoulders rounded and arms dangling in front of him.

Even when sitting correct posture is important. Children should be taught to sit upright, with the spine well supported by the back of the chair. Clumsy and unsuitable chairs should be avoided for the young child. When sitting the feet should reach the ground, with the soles placed squarely on the floor.

As I have said, poor posture is not only the cause of much distress in childhood, but in many cases leads to permanent deformities in later life. In most instances, it is the result of poor habits. In such cases it is easily corrected if proper measures are taken in childhood.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

For Favors Received

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me whether I am in the right or whether I am decidedly in the wrong?

My girl and I have been going out very often with another couple, in the other man's car, and accepting lots of favors from the boy of the other couple. The other girl has a birthday this week and I think it would be rather nice for my girl and me to give her a gift. What do you think? F.

This would be a fine gesture, and you could plan this so charmingly that it would show your appreciation of these many kindnesses. Too, I suggest that you plan other thoughtful things to do for this couple, so that all of the friendly gestures will not be on their side. People who accept car-hospitality constantly from friends should be most careful that they do their share of hospitality in some other form in return. This is most important in these days when this question so often arises. The man-who-owns-one, otherwise will get a bit fed up by constantly giving, and he is quite justified.

Addressing the Widow

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly inform me as to whether or not it is correct to address a letter to a widow using her Christian name following the "Mrs." and preceding her married surname, or whether she should be addressed by her husband's Christian name following the name "Mrs.", for example: should any widow be addressed "Mrs. Jane Doe" or "Mrs. John Doe?" D.

The widow should be addressed as Mrs. John Doe, the same form of formal name as she used when her husband was living.

Household Hints

When garden furniture is made of unpainted wood such as oak or teak, it should be treated occasionally with linseed oil. This will improve the color and keep the wood from cracking.

To make an omelette very light and fluffy, beat the whites and yolks separately, then whisk together before turning into the pan.

CIRCLING SWALLOWS PATTERN 543

Charming Quilt of Scraps

Quiltmaking is an art, and like all arts it uses symbols to express things that in reality are far more complicated in appearance. So we find birds—every sort of bird—shown as triangles and it really is not hard to imagine the bird with outspread wings in this form. In this pattern the swallows are very gay, for they are made of all variety of scraps. Each block can be made in the same scraps or different ones used throughout, as illustrated.

Pattern 543 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

WEST END BANK DEPOSITORS FIGHT PLAN

A group of depositors in the West End Savings Bank and Trust Company, an institution which has operated under restrictions since the banking holiday, has organized to object to a plan submitted for reorganization.

Other depositors have been invited to join with them "to take steps to protect our common interest."

A spokesman for the group indicated that they may not continue to oppose the bank reorganization if they are given full information concerning it. The committee is to confer soon with officials of the bank.

The plan for reorganization outlined recently in a letter to depositors by bank officials called for the formation of a new bank with a capital of $200,000 and a surplus of $100,000.

The plan would transfer 60 per cent of the assets of the old bank to the new bank, of which 45 per cent of the entire deposits would be made available in cash and 15 per cent invested in stock in the new bank. The remaining 40 per cent would be represented in slow assets of the old bank, which would be gradually liquidated.

The committee which announces its objection to the plan in a printed circular includes John H. Spinnenweber, J. H. Crowell, A. O. Jaegar, L. C. Daniels, H. Woodth, F. P. Fiedler, C. J. Schwindt, Joseph E. Jewett and Richard Schindler.

U. S. TO ASSIST STATE BANKS

Strengthening of 90 state banks in Western Pennsylvania, not at present members of the Federal Reserve system, to enable them to take advantage of federal insurance on deposits up to $2,500, effective January 1, is under way.

Charles Smith, chief of the reorganization division, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has been named state supervisor for Western Pennsylvania under the administration's plan. Loren T. Swensen, examiner of the Federal Department Insurance Corporation, has been named deposit insurance supervisor for this district. Both have offices in the Federal Reserve Branch Buildin', Grant street.

On application of nonmember banks to become affiliated with the Federal Reserve System, Mr. Smith explained, an examination of the bank's affairs will be made. No bank, however, will be informed as to whether it has qualified until January 1.

A similar procedure is in effect in all Federal Reserve banking districts of the country.

James Norton, 31, Negro, of 414 Cabot way, South Side, collapsed in his cell in the South Side Police Station last night and was taken to South Side Hospital.

Norton, police said, had been struck on the head with a brick by Joseph Greenwood, 27, Negro, of 42 South Thirtieth street.

The 'Follies' Premiere On Air

By AIRCASTER

In the week's round-up of kilocycle events the one item that sticks out is a general order at NBC, affecting both networks:

To soft-pedal "The Last Round-up," and the next time you'll hear it will be a week hence, when the broadcasters will string wires to Boston to allow the customers a listen on the opening of the Follies.

* * *

Just when Freddy Rich gets all set with his Sunday night hour to buck the Rubinoff-Cantor bill, Columbia-WJAS sells half of it to a perfumer who brings Shilkret music, Katherine Carrington and Milton Watson to the eavesdroppers a week from tomorrow night.

* * *

Major and sweeping administrative changes are reported as slated for the first phases of November at the NBC.

* * *

Pointed?

I'm still scratching my head over a publicity paragraph sent up from WCAE, and marked "Aircaster—exclusively."

"Dave Olsen and Ford Miller are holding revolver practice several times each week," it says.

My Frands!!!

* * *

Attracted by their excellent pinch-hitting for the fire chief, two sponsors are craving auditions by the team of East and Dumke.

* * *

Recommended to fastidious listeners:

The swell vocal arrangements of the Yacht Club Boys on WCAE Saturday nights.

Also Lennie Hayton's piano fingering on WJAS tonight at 8:30.

Leo Reisman's simplified arrangements.

The cute work of Mary Small, whom NBC is giving an unprecedented build-up.

Irene Beasley's canarying from Chi.

The lazy-voiced Irene Taylor, and Mark Warnow's contrasting melodies, with Gertrude Niesen's interpolations.

Byrd Program

A two-way broadcast between a ship at sea and the New York studios will inaugurate the Saturday night programs to originate each week from the Byrd Antarctic expedition via CBS-WJAS.

The ship, the Jacob Ruppert, will be en route to the South Polar regions.

Its part of the program is to be a talk by Admiral Byrd. The New York end will supply music by orchestra and soloists.

The opening date has been set for November 18 at 10 p. m.

In this connection, NBC, together with W2XAF and WGY, Schenectady, is to have special broadcasts every other Saturday night to the expedition.

* * *

A special program marking the thirteenth anniversary of the birth of broadcasting is being planned by KDKA, and WJZ-NBC for Thursday night. Gov. Pinchot and M. H. Aylesworth, president of NBC, are to talk.

Children's Program On WCAE Today

The Sun-Telegraph Family Children's program is heard over WCAE this afternoon at 4:45.

Julian Lee Rayford, singing poet, is the guest of Louis L. Kaufman, Globe Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, during his 12:15 broadcast this afternoon.

The Globe Trotter airs the day's news over WCAE-WJAS at 12:15 and 2:15 p. m., and over WCAE at 6:30 p. m.

She's a Lulu

Lulu McConnell, one of the three stars of "The Big Show," heard over WJAS tonight at 9:30, is radio's fastest talking woman.

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

The arithmetic class did very well with their home work. Everyone seemed to get the right answer to the problem printed here several days ago.

Everybody but me, that is. I thought it was a tough problem—which gives you some idea of my calculating ability.

The nicest thing about it was the letters it brought from old correspondents.

Here's a letter from Martha Lescalette, Midway. One from Nelle V. Eicher, Oakmont, and one from a reader in Newell, West Virginia, who says make them harder.

If you have some tough ones, send 'em in, brother! In the meantime:

How long would it take a snail to climb a 20-foot wall. It climbs 5 feet during the day and slips back four feet every night. How many days would it take to reach the top?

* * *

Try this idea from Mrs. Ramsey, of Monessen.

Plant orange and lemon seeds in a fern dish or anything suitable for a center piece. Plant seeds thickly, and by Christmas you'll have a pretty plant.

* * *

Speaking of ferns:

Where did Dr. Gear's palm tree walk off to the other night?

The Arlington avenue doctor says that prior to its disappearance it always stood in a tub in the corner. Could it be those goblins? If so will the goblins put it back?

* * *

Jake Fugh, evidently tired of hearing about the marvels that grow in Carnegie soil, brings in the biggest carrot you ever did see!

Weighs almost three pounds, and is almost as big as a football. He points out that it grew on his farm in O'Hara Township.

Tomorrow, look for the story about Mrs. Mander's one-legged robin.

PRUDENCE PENNY RECIPES WINNING PRAISE FROM HOUSEWIVES

Prudence Penny is amazed at the interest the housewives of Pittsburgh and vicinity are taking in the favorite recipe contest now running in the Sun-Telegraph. Irrespective of whether or not they are personally winning any of the cash prizes, hundreds are writing letters to this department praising it as a service. One housewife writes:

"I have clipped so many fine recipes from the Sun-Telegraph since this contest started and added so many to my cookbook, that the book is beginning to look like an over-stuffed turkey."

This brings the suggestion that it will be soon time to submit recipes particularly adaptable to the Thanksgiving table.

The Sun-Telegraph awards $15 in cash prizes every day for the best favorite home recipes submitted to Prudence Penny—$5 for the best of the day and $1 each to 10 others every day. Take a chance—send in your favorites. If they win a prize they will be printed in the Sun-Telegraph, and in this way help other housewives. Address Prudence Penny, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and send in as many as you like.

ORANGE PECTIN

Cut yellow rind from oranges after juice has been extracted for table use. Run the white portion remaining through food chopper. Weigh. For each pound of white peel add two pounds or one quart of water and four tablespoons of lemon juice. Mix and let stand one-half hour. Add one more quart of water and boil 10 minutes. Let stand over night. Next morning boil 15 minutes, cool slightly and drain through jelly bag. If not need at once, bottle as you would fruit and set aside to be used in making jelly and preserves that do not contain enough pectin to jell by themselves. During winter when we use so many oranges this is an easy way to have a supply of canned pectin for spring canning.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: That good looker the papers wondered about, who occupied so much of Chevalier's time on the way going over, was Caryl Bergman, the ex-Ziegfeld darling . . . She's now Caryl Bergis, a hit at the Montmartre, Paris . . . Incidentally, Lucienne Boyer, the female Chevalier of that city, has finally been persuaded to come to America. She is supposed to have inspired the song, "Parlez Moi D'Amour" (Speak to Me of Love) . . . Roy Mack wonders if you want to do a chorus girl a favor. Her name is Marjorie Sohmer—he made a test of her—and now she can't be located and he has a part for her . . . Betty Bronson, who retired from the screen when she became a bride about a year ago, is doing the rounds of the booking sector again . . . All that fuss about Maurice not wanting to co-star with Jeanette MacDonald in "Merry Widow" seems to be a successful stunt to start controversy. The contract was signed at Arches a year ago.

In "Bombshell," which is a good movie, the character Ben Varanda, of course, is Ben Piazza, the MGM casting director . . . They reiterate that S. Katz, the one-time bizgie with Paramount-Publix, will ally himself with a major studio in about six weeks . . . Eugene O'Neill always prepares a scenario version of his plays—yet the studios have always engaged lesser knowns to prepare their own. Figure that out . . . The Joe Cook show is operated along the lines of Big Business—everybody, even the principals, I hear, must punch the time clock there . . . The Yacht Club Boys at the Embassy stumped me on the phone with this silly—which stumps nearly everyone, they say . . . Two trains starting out at the same time for the same destination on parallel tracks—get there at different moments. One arrives in 60 minutes and the other takes an hour and 20—why? Oh, somebody told you.

The town will see a new fleet of cabs this week. About 200 of them will be put on the market as a starter—the new feature being radios to keep your mind off the meter . . . The latest Machado yarn involves a smart hotel in the 50s, which was offered $1,000 daily by Machado to house his entire retinue—about 40 people. They turned him down—rather than risk danger to other guests . . . You mentioned Len Liebling. He's now broadcasting, besides his other activities, for WABC on Sunday afternoons, probably the only music critic who is allowed to speak his mind on the air . . . Joan Castle (whose heart is Courtney Burr, producer of "Sailor, Beware") is understudy to the leading lady . . . Helen Lynd spurned two Hollywood jobs—not enough munnee . . . A chap who said he was Martin Leland Rittemore, Jr., wants it known that Glenda Moorehead will be his bride next month.

Some of the chorus in "Let 'Em Eat Cake" probably will have to . . . They were with it during all the heavy rehearsing until Boston, when room was made for many of the "Of Thee I Sing" kids . . . Funny situation at that on the Fox lot—Lew Brown, Buddy DeSylva and Ray Henderson — and soon George White — who split up after providing so many hits—are now working for the same boss . . . Bruce and Rowland are promoting William Frawley for his original assignment in their movie version of "Sons o' Guns" . . . Arthur Brown who went to Hollywood chiefly for the ride, wound up with a part in Zanuck's "Lovelorn" . . . Jerry Berger, the half-pint at the Ha-Ha, is wedded to a lass thrice his footage! . . . Mary Ellen Brown, the baby of the new "Follies," is the first to suffer from heartache. Only 17 and "done with men"! She screams . . . I saw that horrible accident at the Rodeo. The boys who throw steers so easily were criticized for not stopping the horse, and they shouldn't be. They stopped it as soon as they could—without endangering the girl's life more than it was, poor thing.

If you're still wondering where Frisco is—he's at Luigi's Supper Club in Detroit . . . Those Greenwich Village artists who were refused a permit to hold an outdoor art exhibition have been befriended by Ruth C. White and associates, who have turned over the Bal Musette to them . . . When "Nana" is finally revealed to the screen, after all that long wait, the great story will not show Anna Sten as a streetwalker—but as an actress! . . . They keep trying to link C. Vanderbilt, Jr., with this one and that one—so dismiss the talk about a romance between Neil and Irene Rich . . . Durante's last broadcast, one of his better ones, was written by Milton Raison . . . A phone tip said there was a good story in a man who formerly decorated most of the theaters in town and the smarter residences for celebs—who now is gravely ill on Welfare Island at the City Hosp . . . Gave no name . . . The attorneys for the family of Katherine Cripps urge you to help find her—they say it represents a heart-rending situation, and she reads you, etc.

You may easily toss some orchids at Paul Muni for his performance in "The World Changes"—he belongs high on anybody's list . . . George M. MovieComics Plan Stage Tour

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 30.—Going the personal appearance idea one better, Bert Wheeler, Robert Woolsey, Thelma Todd and Dorothey Lee will join together in a musical comedy and make a swing through Texas, up the South Atlantic coast, the Middle West and finally to New York.

Miss Lee

The vehicle, "Dumb Bells," is all ready and the four-starred caravan will leave Hollywood soon after they finish "Hip, Hips, Hooray" at RKO. They plan to play in Phoenix, El Paso, Fort Worth, Dallas, New Orleans, Memphis, Chicago, Detroit and on to Broadway.

If you can believe its enthusiastic backers, "Dumb Bells" will not be the thrown-together show such as road audiences have been victimized by in the past. Tim Whelan, Wheeler and Woolsey collaborated on the book and the veteran team of Kalmar and Ruby have furnished the songs.

La Garbo's pet scotty is named Wimpy, and it now comes out that the privacy-loving Swede is an ardent follower of the comic strips. The dog got its name because it's so fond of Hamburger. Despite her aloofness to Hollywood, Greta also is said to follow the motion picture columns and the fan magazines closely.

Though Warner Brothers isn't saying, rumor insists that George Brent's contract will be suspended because he asked to be excused from the picture "Mandalay." The production boss, Hal Wallis, and the associate producer, Robert Presnell, had to put in a hurry call for Lyle Talbot, who got up practically from a sick bed to fly to join the troupe. The actor's doctors were dubious about him going to work so soon after his recent injury, but were finally won over.

Just as Bing Crosby was taking bows after a personal appearance at the Paramount Theater, a young girl ran up on the stage, threw her arms around his neck, cried: "Bing, I think you're marvelous" and gave him a long kiss. The embarrassed crooner laughed the incident off as best he could while his impetuous admirer ran up the aisle and out of the theater before anybody could stop her.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Judging by the queue at the box office, from the time the sale opened last Thursday, a capacity audience will greet Helen Hayes when she appears as the tragic queen in "Mary of Scotland," historical play by Maxwell Anderson, in the Nixon tonight. Co-featured with Miss Hayes are Helen Menken, as Queen Elizabeth, and Philip Merivale as Bothwell. A regal role seems particularly appropriate for Miss Hayes, who has achieved the distinction of being one of the queens of the American stage, the others probably being Katharine Cornell and Lynn Fontanne, in the estimation of theatergoers. The play is the second Theater Guild production of the season, likewise the second offering of the subscription series, and it is in its second week, having made its bow in Washington last Monday. Nevertheless, we assume it to be first-rate.

* * *

The third play in the subscription season of the American Theater Society is only a week away. This will be "A Trip to Pressburg," which will come with a cast headed by Pola Negri, whom American film patrons immediately recognized as a real actress before they knew her as well as they came to later. That was when she burst upon them in "Passion" a foreign-made film that also made them acquainted with Emil Jannings. As a result of her work in that picture she was signed by an American studio, and it was not long until she was one of the most popular stars of silent films. Her alleged romance with Rudolph Valentino was a matter of public interest, and her grief at his death seems to have been so genuine as to dispel any suspicion that that it was a matter of press agentry, as many "affairs of heart" among players really are. "A Trip to Pressburg" is a comedy importation from Europe.

Cook to Make Film When Play Ends

Joe Cook has been engaged by the Fox Film Corporation to convert his stage eccentricities to the screen.

Following the run of his recently opened and successful "Hold Your Horses," now at the Winter Garden, New York, Mr. Cook will journey to Hollywood to make the first of his comedy concoctions for the talking pictures. He will be assisted by Dave Chason, whom Mr. Cook chooses to characterize "prince of stooges."

His signature on the Fox contract follows closely the engagement of George White, by the same company.

Chinese Actress Cast In Dunn Film

Bo-Ling, one of the few Chinese girls in films, twin sister of Bo-Ching, has been cast for a part in "Jimmy and Sally," with James Dunn and Claire Trevor. Casting directors can't tell the two 19-year-old girls apart.

Fairy Drama Liked

By MARGARET RUSSELL

"The King of the Golden River," Clare Tree Major's dramatization of John Ruskin's famous story of the splendid triumph of goodness, kindness and brotherly love over selfishness, cruelty and greed, produced by the Children's Theater Company of New York, was greeted with youthful enthusiasm and delight by several hundred of Pittsburgh's juveniles in the Nixon Saturday.

If coming events cast their shadows before, the remaining five plays of the children's season, "The Five Little Peppers," December 2; "Curdie, the Princess and the Goblin," January 6; "Cinderella," February 10; "An Old-Fashioned Girl," March 17, and "Rip Van Winkle," April 21, will be well attended.

"The King of the Golden River" is a sugar-coated moral lesson for youngsters. It is a parable, to be sure, but dressed up in the accoutrements dear to the childish heart: animated winds, magical spells, an ill-treated Horatio Alger-like boy hero and his Gretchen-like playmate, her kindly mother, the wicked brothers (comparable to Cinderella's irate kinswomen).

The cast played their roles with cleverly exaggerated simplicity, comprehensible to childish minds and with picturesque sprightliness dear to their hearts.

GIVE THAT COLD JUST ONE DAY!

Rout It Overnight!

A cold that hangs on is a cold to fear. Serious complications are possible. Daily with no cold, but treat it promptly and for what it is—an internal infection. Employ internal treatment and one that is strictly for colds and not for a lot of other things as well.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is internal and direct. It is complete in effect. It does the four things necessary.

It opens the bowels, gently but thoroughly. It combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. It relieves the headache and grippy feeling. It tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack. Anything less than that is courting danger.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is absolutely safe to take. For more than forty years it has been the standard cold and grippe tablet of the world, the formula keeping pace with Modern Medicine. Every druggist sells Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, 30c and 50c. Druggists who put your interest above a few pennies extra profit won't try to sell you a substitute.

Don't wait until a cold has taken over your system, but at the first sneeze or chill go right to your druggist for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters L B Q stamped on every tablet.

All In A Day

The Soul of Confidence

Mr. Jonah Q. Witherbee had had a face like a pan of worms. At least, he always said that when speaking to his pupils of the dim and dark past. Today, with the enlightenment that comes with confidence, his face was not wormlike at all. It was big and bland and round, reminiscent of an Easter egg with the coloring.

Mr. Witherbee was fond of saying that, back in the old days, he had been nothing in life—"even less than nothing." That remark about the past always made his thirty-odd pupils lean forward expectantly, hopefully. For Mr. Witherbee's job was to inject confidence, superconfidence, in these timid, forlorn pupils. It was a job, my friends, as difficult as trying to teach English to a class of Broadway columnists.

But Mr. Witherbee never gave up. And he was thankful that the pupils didn't either. For that was his means of livelihood, and three dollars per lesson twice a week is a nice piece of change in these days of arrant prosperity.

"My friends," he would begin unctuously, "confidence is the secret of success. But an open secret, I might add. Each of you is a working man. Each of you has a boss, a superior. And each of you wants to be boss.

"But why is it that somebody else got the job? Why? I repeat. Is it because the other man was better qualified than you? Is it because the other man is more intelligent? Is it because the other man is more of a natural executive than you? No! A thousand times no! The answer is confidence. Plain, unadulterated confidence."

After that explosion, Witherbee subsided for a moment. He searched the timid faces in the chairs below him, and assumed a beseeching air by spreading his hands palm upward before him.

"You, too, can have confidence. You have confidence. It has been submerged for years by false modesty, and fear. But I, Jonah Quincey Witherbee, will bring it out of each of you. I will help you to success."

The mood changed. The chin thrust itself outward, the eyes bulged. The Mussolini in Witherbee came to the fore.

"I have confidence in me!" he shouted. "I have confidence in me! Quick! Repeat the words with me. I have confidence in me!" The chant was murmurous, almost apologetic. "I have confidence in me."

After the lesson was over, Witherbee collected three dollars from each pupil. Cash was his motto. He had confidence, but he wasn't foolish. . . .

On the street he was the very soul of confidence. When he met a pupil, he smiled broadly, shook hands with a firm grip, and discussed anything and everything with all the aplomb of an Elmer Gantry.

For years, he pummeled confidence into the heads of men, at so much per head. Sometimes, it worked. More often, it didn't. But that made little difference to Witherbee. Lack of confidence, he preached, was what ailed the world. Confidence was a cure-all.

Then, on one quiet evening during the fall of last year, the students assembled in the little hall where class was held, and sat on the rickety chairs waiting for Mr. Witherbee. They smiled at each other, and murmured polite "hellos" here and there. But each in his heart felt a contempt for the other. Each knew that the other was timid, helpless—like himself.

They sat there, looking at the faded American flag on the stage, and fidgeting. Eight o'clock came and went, but not Mr. Witherbee. One of his own axioms, number forty-seven in the key to confidence, was punctuality. Yet here he was late. And at eight-thirty, he hadn't arrived yet.

At 9 o'clock the small group broke up. They agreed that there was no further use waiting. Something must have happened to the professor. Something very important, they felt. And when one of them phoned the professor's home, they discovered what had happened.

The professor was in the hospital. No, it wasn't serious. Merely a tonsil operation. Mr. Witherbee had been bothered with a bad throat for years, and the family doctor had ordered him to the hospital, to have the offending tonsils removed.

Still, despite the fact that the operation was a minor one, the pupils felt duty bound to visit him on the morrow. They agreed that, in the evening, they would all meet, buy a huge basket of fruit—(which a tonsil patient could never eat)—and visit their beloved leader.

They walked into the hospital in a body. At the entrance to Mr. Witherbee's room, they were met by a doctor.

"We came," said the first pupil, "to see Mr. Witherbee."

The doctor scanned their faces. Then he spoke.

"You can't see Mr. Witherbee now. I'm sorry."

The pupils gulped. The leader trembled.

"Wasn't the operation a success?" he murmured.

The doctor smiled in a superior manner.

"Absolutely. It was quite simple."

Thirty men sighed with relief. It sounded like the airbrakes on the Twentieth Century Limited.

"When will he be back to teach us Confidence?" asked the leader.

"Never," replied the doctor. "He died an hour ago."

The 30 looked at each other and shuddered. Their world was in flames.

"But what? How? It couldn't —" began the leader.

"Mr. Witherbee," said the doctor, "died an hour ago of heart failure. It was caused by a complete lack of confidence, resulting in hysteria and fright."

HERRON, M'NAIR SWAP VERBAL PUNCHES

assessing property, he said, was all right.

Councilman English interjected:

"You admit the city assessors office has been conducted unpolitically then?"

McNair shot back:

"No, I say that the assessors are ward chairmen and you never see them."

English sought to ply more questions but the crowd roared:

"Sit down."

McNair stressed that the tax system and not the politicians kept the city on good financial standing. He wasted five minutes of his 20-minute period to English.

English denied he had proposed a tax on washing machines, saying it was only a suggestion sent to council.

In response to queries Herron said he favored abolition of tax qualifications for voters. McNair thought Pennsylvanians would be "pretty slow to change their minds."

Herron Realty Deal Made Campaign Issue

Thomas J. Gallagher, Democratic nominee for Council, today demanded that Mayor John S. Herron explain an East End real estate transaction involving property valued at $25,000 which he asserted passed from the Flinn interests to Mrs. Herron at the time the Flinn garbage contract was under fire four years ago. Herron was then president of Council.

At that time Gallagher declared at a noon rally in Democratic headquarters, the American Reduction Company, of which the late George H. Flinn was the head, stood accused by former City Controller Henry O. Evans with overcharging the city by more than $1,000,000. The company subsequently repaid part of the money, he asserted.

ASKS INFORMATION

Gallagher wound up with:

"We hope that before the campaign closes that Mr. Herron will condescend to offer an explation not only as to why his 20 years in Council have been paralleled by 20 years of profitable garbage monopoly for the Flinn interest but also as to why he is receiving rentals from a piece of property approximately worth $25,000 which was transferred to his wife from a confidential employe of the Flinn Realty Company when the Flinn garbage company was under fire charged with collecting from the taxpayers of the City of Pittsburgh more than $1,000,000 which didn't belong to it."

The property in question, according to Gallagher, is at Fifth and Hamilton avenues. He asserted that the transfer of the property took place after former Controller Evans' disclosures of the surcharge by the garbage company had been made.

The chief auditor of the controller's office responsible for checking the garbage company was fired by Evans, but put back on the payroll by Council, Gallagher said. He continued:

"Now we will put in the record the story of a real estate transaction that also took place in 1929, between the time of the sensational disclosure by Controller Evans and the awarding of a new contract to the Flinn garbage company.

"The chief owner and head of the American Reduction Company, the Flinn garbage company in 1929, was George H. Flinn. Mr. Flinn also was president of the Freehold Real Estate Company, a local company, engaged as its name indicates in the development and sale of real estate.

DEEDS RECORDED

"The records of the office of the Recorder of Deeds for Allegheny County show that on February 25, 1929, one James E. Gilson, an employe of the Freehold Real Estate Company and a confidential aide to Mr. Flinn, took title from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to a piece of property at Fifth and Hamilton avenues, East End, for a consideration of $50,000.

"On November 12, 1929, Gilson sold one-half of this property to the Standard Oil Company, for use as a gas station. On the same day, November 12, 1929, the deed to the Standard Oil Company was placed on record.

"Again on the same day, November 12, 1929, Gilson executed a deed to one Maurice Teplitz for the remainder of the property.

"And once more on the same day, November 12, 1929, Teplitz executed a deed for the same piece of property to C. W. Herron, wife of John S. Herron.

"Now make note of this also. The Gilson deed to Teplitz, although executed on November 12, 1929, was not placed on record until September 22, 1931—being kept secret for almost two years.

"The Teplitz deed to Mrs. Herron, made on November 12, 1929, was not placed on public record until March 22, 1932—two and one-half years later, and just prior to the recording of a lease for the rental of the property to the Atlantic Refining Company for a period of five years. The consideration being $1,200 per year, free of all taxes.

"This lease was signed by John S. Herron and his wife, Cora W. Herron.

"In view of the fact that at the time the deed for this property was executed by a confidential clerk in the employ of the Flinn Real Estate Company, the Flinn Garbage Company was under charges of having collected more than $1,000,000 from the city of Pittsburgh than it was entitled to under its contract; in view of the other sensational disclosures made by Controller Evans at that time; in view of the re-employment of the accountant responsible for allowing the Flinn Garbage Company to collect the overcharge; in view of the fact that in spite of all that had transpired, the Flinn Garbage Company was again given the contract for collecting garbage and rubbish—in view of all these things, it does seem that the people of the city of Pittsburgh are entitled to a complete and frank explanation from Mr. Herron concerning this transaction.

'STRAW MAN' CHARGED

"First of all the people are entitled to know the circumstances surrounding the origin of this real estate transaction. Let Mr. Herron explain the deal with the Flinn Realty Company at a time when the Flinn Garbage Company was accused of overcharging the city of Pittsburgh over $1,000,000.

"Second, if the transaction was a legitimate one, why was it necessary to use a 'straw man' in transferring the property from the Flinn Realty Company employe to Mrs. Herron?

"Thirdly, why was the deed to Teplitz kept off the record for two years and the deed to Mrs. Herron kept off the record for two and one-half years, until the time when it had to be recorded, in order that the lease for the property could be executed.

"Year after year, Herron and other members of the councilmanic garbage bloc have been promising that 'next year' a contract for the collection of garbage and rubbish would be advertised for a three, five or ten-year period and that bids would be asked for early enough in the year to permit any would-be competitor to erect reduction and disposal plants in time to take over the contract by the first of the ensuing year."

HERRON AND M'NAIR ANSWER QUESTIONNAIRE

Mayor John S. Herron herewith replies to a series of questions propounded by the Sun-Telegraph in connection with the mayoralty campaign.

1—Question. Do you favor and will you work for, if you do, the taxing of real estate of public utilities?

Answer. We get our authority to levy taxes from the state and as the state must have revenue to provide for the schools, hospitals, insane asylums, prisons, State Department of Public Health and various other things that require revenue, the state taxes public utilities to obtain a portion of this necessary revenue.

If a substitute can be found to provide necessary revenue for the state, to take the place of that which might be diverted to the city from the public utilities, we would be very glad indeed to secure this additional revenue, but a certain amount of money is required for both state and city purposes and this amount comes from the taxpayer in one form or another.

2—Q. Do you favor the extension of the graded tax law to the county and school districts?

A. No. The graded tax was never intended to apply to farm land or large estates. It has always been advanced that the graded tax law would stimulate building and as we have many hundreds of idle buildings now I can see no advantage in the extension of the graded tax to the county and school districts.

3—A. Do you approve the present system of one-year garbage disposal contracts, which appear to provide a monopoly through virtual elimination of competitive bidding?

If you do not, what changes in the system do you have to suggest?

Will you do anything about it?

A. Yes, I do favor the present one-year contract, because of the present conditions and the unsettled conditions of the labor market. A five-year contract at this time would be more or less hazardous.

With a one-year contract we have been able to bring down the cost of garbage and rubbish collections in the past three years more than $600,000.

Had a contract been let five years ago it would have cost the taxpayers several hundred thousands of dollars which they have been saved.

4—Q. Will you use what influence you have in the Legislature to create limited dividend housing corporations through which the city might act with private individuals to speedily eliminate slum districts?

A. We would be very happy to lend whatever assistance we might have that would not obligate the city financially. We have been told that this money is a federal loan and must be repaid.

While it would be a fine thing to have our old and antiquated buildings razed and new ones replace them yet the city itself would have to be free from financial responsibility in this respect.

It should be thoroughly understood that the repayment of any money secured from the federal government for this purpose could only be made by placing additional taxes to take care of the sinking fund and interest charges thereon, thus adding additional burden upon the taxpayers.

5—Q. Do you believe city taxes can be decreased in the face of revenue deficits because of tax delinquencies?

Do you believe taxes must be increased if delinquents do not more speedily pay their taxes?

What plans have you for municipal financing due to the inability of the city to collect taxes from many property owners?

A. No. We have fixed responsibilities—25 cents out of every dollar now goes for interest and sinking fund charges. We have reduced the cost of government in the last three years more than $6,600,000, and we did it without selling anybody's property for delinquent taxes. We have conducted the affairs of the city so well that we have met the approval of Dun & Bradstreet and the Standard Statistical Corporation and all the bond buyers throughout the country.

We will strive to prevent a tax increase. In the final analysis the city must receive a certain amount of money in order to function, which comes to the treasury from one source or another. At the present time we receive approximately $13,000,000 from taxes on real estate and the balance, approximately $8,000,000, from other sources.

If we can provide additional revenue from other sources the present burden could be relieved proportionately on real estate. It is our hope to bring this about. We will, undoubtedly, receive a great deal more money next year than we did during the present year from the liquor licenses, which at one time amounted to more than $1,000,000 per year.

6—Q. Do you favor consolidation of the City and County Tax Assessment boards, a question which rests with the Legislature, but can be influenced by the attitude of city officials?

A. I am not particularly concerned about the consolidation, but I do think valuations should be uniform and that co-operation in the highest degree should be given by both bodies.

7—Q. Do you favor consolidation of the City and County Welfare departments?

A. That will require considerable thought, as we had that problem before the Legislature last year and complications arose which could not then be adjusted.

It must be remembered that the city, as well as the county, takes care of the insane, and it seems to me that some arrangement should be made for the consolidation of the homes, and we will try to bring that about, but the city has so many cases that they must look after, that it might be just a little more humane and friendly for these unfortunates if the city would take care of its own indigents, especially as very little saving would result from this particular phase of consolidation.

8—Q. If you think street car, gas and electric rates are too high, what, if anything could or would you as Mayor do to reduce charges?

A. The city has negotiated with the light company in connection with electric light rates, and while in the opinion of some some people they are still high, yet we were successful in securing a very substantial reduction therein. It must be understood by the general public that the Public Service Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is charged with the fixing of all rates of this nature.

In reference to street car fares, we have a Traction Conference Board, on which the city has two representatives, the boroughs and the townships one and the Street Railways Company one. One of the city's representatives is chairman of the board, Mr. Charles A. Finley, a former Director of the Department of Public Works under former Mayor William A. Magee. Mr. Magee is now the solicitor for the Traction Conference Board.

I am sure if, in their opinion, a reduction can be brought about they will be very happy to take such steps as will accomplish such reduction.

Candidates Reply To Questionnaire

Beginning today, the Sun-Telegraph will publish the replies of candidates for Mayor, Council and Juvenile Court to a series of questions asked of them by the Sun-Telegraph.

Today, answers by the mayoralty candidates are published.

Tomorrow and Wednesday Council candidates will present their views.

Thursday will be Juvenile Court day.

Attorney William N. McNair, candidate for Mayor on the Democratic ticket, answers below the series of questions asked both mayoralty candidates by the Sun-Telegraph:

1—Question. Do you favor and will you work for, if you do, the taxing of real estate of public utilities?

Answer. As stated in my many addresses in this campaign, I am in favor of the taxing of real estate of utilities on the same basis that other real estate is taxed.

2—Q. Do you favor the extension of the graded tax law to the county and school districts?

A. Again, as I have frequently stated in this campaign, I favor the extension of the graded tax law to make it applicable to county and school taxes.

There is no doubt that, as the Sun-Telegraph stated in its editorial of October 27, "the graded tax law has worked," and there is no doubt in my mind of the benefit of the graded tax law to the average home owner and to those who seek, for the benefit of the community, to improve their properties.

The fact that a man of the qualifications and training of the Hon. William A. Magee has publicly stated his approval and endorsement of this is an evidence of the wisdom of extending the same.

3—Q. Do you approve the present system of one-year garbage disposal contracts, which appear to provide a monopoly through virtual elimination of competitive bidding?

If you do not, what changes in the system do you have to suggest?

Will you do anything about it?

A. I do not approve of the one-year garbage disposal contracts. It is my strong impression that these contracts have been so handled as to virtually exclude all except favored bidders. I am not prepared at this time to make specific recommendations.

I shall certainly, if elected to office, do everything in my power to have established a system which will be efficient from the sanitary engineering standpoint, and as economical as is consistent with efficient service.

4—Q. Will you use what influence you have in the Legislature to create limited dividend housing corporations through which the city might act with private individuals to speedily eliminate slum districts?

A. I certainly will use what influence I have to co-operate in the creation of limited dividend housing corporations, or any other such agencies, in an effort to eliminate slums.

I will have in mind always in that respect, to the fullest extent of my ability, to prevent the sacrifice of the health, comfort and morals of the poor to greed and special privilege.

5—Q. Do you believe city taxes can be decreased in the face of revenue deficits because of tax delinquencies?

Do you believe taxes must be increased if delinquents do not more speedily pay their taxes?

What plans have you for municipal financing due to the inability of the city to collect taxes from many property owners?

A. We have before us the examples of numerous American cities which, by efficient administration, by careful pruning of the excrescences which have attached themselves to the administrative agencies of the city, reduced their operating expense.

This does not mean that any competent necessary worker protected by the Civil Service would be removed, nor that efficient workers would be sacrificed for party preferment. It is simply a question of a proper and efficient administration.

I do not believe taxes will necessarily be increased, nor can I, in the space of this answer, give a comprehensive plan for further municipal financing.

6—Q. Do you favor consolidation of the City and County Tax Assessment Boards, a question which rests with the Legislature, but can be influenced by the attitude of city officials?

A. There is no doubt in my mind that there is a tremendous duplication of effort in the City and County Tax Assessing Boards. I am in favor of any equitable adjustment of their relations which will give adequate service in the assessing of properties, and a reduction in the expense incident thereto.

There is not space, in the scope of these answers, to discuss the mechanics incident to such a realignment.

7—Q. Do you favor consolidation of the City and County Welfare Departments?

A. The principle underlying the answer to the previous question is applicable to my answer to this question.

There is a certain absurdity in the citizens of Pittsburgh, insofar as they are also citizens of Allegheny County, maintaining a dual system of welfare and relief.

Of course, should the citizens of the State of Pennsylvania at any time adopt a system of old-age pensions it would necessarily follow that the municipality would be relieved of a large part of the burden of the maintenance of the Welfare Department.

8—Q. If you think street car, gas and electric rates are too high, what, if anything, could or would you as Mayor do to reduce charges?

A. I would, first of all, offer to the representatives of the utility corporations an opportunity to participate in effecting a New Deal for their patrons in Pittsburgh.

I would expect them to evidence their good faith by throwing open such corporate records as would enable competent experts to ascertain a basis for justifying existing or proposed rates for service.

If such good faith is shown, I would meet them half way in working out a solution of our mutual problems.

If the opportunity were refused by the utilities, I would feel justified in using any and all means at my disposal to force satisfactory action.

REOPENING OF BANNED FOSTER HOMES PROBED

POLITICS

The Campaign as It Is to Independents

By MARK SHIELDS

The municipal campaign enters its final week with the Republicans on the defensive, the natural position for a party in power. It is the Democrats who must make the attack, just as they did in 1932, and just as independent Republicans did in the primary elections of 1927, 1929, 1930 and 1931.

Mr. Shields

Democrats must from now on continue to reiterate their appeal to Republicans who have participated in independent movements, and who have followed independent leaders. So far the Democrats have secured the accession of a number of men and women who have played a part in Republican politics, some prominently, others somewhat reservedly and ineffectively.

But they have not secured one real independent leader, some one such as County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, or his colleague, C. M. Barr. They have received no apparent assistance from Senator Frank J. Harris, and they have been told by Senator William D. Mansfield that he is for the straight Republican ticket.

* * *

Some Have Not Won Independent Label

Those who have joined the Democrats have been labeled as independents. But with two or three exceptions they were independent of—because antagonistic to—the regular Republican organization in the last primary, and have continued so in the general election.

If the Republican organization was not so vulnerable because of its past—and even present—arrogance and impatience with any individual or group given to original and personal thought it could capitalize on the present situation.

But the Republican organization can't because of its own shortcomings.

However, there is no reason that an impartial observer, looking with a skeptical eye at all pretension, friendly to the shifters personally, but a stickler for keeping the record straight, should not record a bit of history.

Friends of the late Judge Richard W. Martin and Judge James H. Gray, among Republican independents, recall that James F. Malone was active at a "town meeting" in 1927, and in the campaign designed to prevent these gentlemen, appointed to the bench by Gov. Pinchot, from continuing their service.

* * *

Malone for Pinchot, Against McGovern

Mr. Malone did work for Gov. Pinchot in the primary of 1930, and was appointed Secretary of Property and Supplies in the Pinchot cabinet as a reward.

But he quit that job in 1931 rather than support Col. McGovern as an independent, instead declaring for the late Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong.

When Mr. Pinchot, independent Republican, was a candidate for the Senate in 1926, Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell was first for George Wharton Pepper and later for William S. Vare, and when Gov. Pinchot sought the Republican gubernatorial nomination in 1930, Mr. Mackrell was for Francis Shunk Brown. Mr. Mackrell has been rebellious rather than independent, until now within the organization.

Some organization Republicans say that Mr. Mackrell's declaration for the Democratic ticket was induced by an agreement that the deficit of his primary campaign of last month would be cleared up. That is a statement which no one can prove, only Mr. Mackrell and those who dealt with him prior to his declaration for William N. McNair being aware of what transpired.

But it also is a fact that Mr. Mackrell supported Commissioner Barr in 1931, certainly an independent gesture. Then he was vigorously opposed to Democratic County Chairman David L. Lawrence, a candidate for Commissioner, principally because Mr. Lawrence was backed by the Republican Senator James J. Coyne, between whom and Mr. Mackrell there is a bitter feud.

William P. Witherow is a real independent. So is Mrs. Templeton Smith, as well as her sister, Mrs. John O. Miller.

* * *

Judge May Not Back Brother's Position

John Patterson has indorsed the Democrats, an accession which is hailed chiefly because he is the brother of Judge Frank P. Patterson. Yet that declaration does not bind Judge Patterson, who is maintaining a judicial attitude of saying nothing in a general election, but who reliably is reported to favor Mayor John S. Herron. There may be quite a story in the background of what induced John Patterson to declare for Mr. McNair, which may have nothing to do with independence in politics.

Some of the independent Republicans who fought past campaigns today are asking where was this new crop of "independents" when the going was tough and pioneer work was being done—with little hope of patronage.

These are merely rambling thoughts and a recounting of history. They certainly are not intended to induce independent Republicans to the Republican ticket, which gives them no great hope of the attainment of their ideals. As an independent or dissatisfied citizen looks around he must feel somewhat baffled, except as his ideals may be advanced through the confusion which comes from a political housecleaning. That is the basis on which Mr. Edward O. Tabor made his declaration for McNair, one of the smartest and sourdest statements made during the campaign.

AUTO KILLS BOY; 3 WOMEN INJURED

Car of Doctor's Son Figures in Crash; 2 Flee Wreck

William Lemp, 8, of 9 Ruth street, died in South Side Hospital early today of injuries suffered a few hours before when he was struck by an automobile, driven according to police, by William Orris, of 98 Ruth street. The youth, playing near his home, ran in front of the car police said.

Three women were injured yesterday when the auto in which they were riding collided with a car driven by Charles Johnson, 19, of 316 Gross street, son of Dr. S. H. Johnson, a member of the city civil service commission.

Injured were Mrs. Elizabeth Garrigan, 84, of 4075 Cabinet way; her daughter, Catherine, 43, of 408 Taylor street; and Mrs. Elinor Haas, 22, of 40 Frazier street, McKees Rocks. Neither Johnson, nor Raymond Haas, driver of the other machine, were injured.

Driven through a red traffic light at West Ohio street and Sherman avenue, an allegedly stolen automobile collided with a car driven by George Hallewell, 49, of 2811 McDowell street, and upset. Two of the three occupants of the car said to be stolen fled. The third, injured, was taken to Presbyterian Hospital. He said he was Ray Mostyn, 26, of 1116 Morrison avenue.

ACCUSE LODGER IN STABBING

John Ollick, 44, was being held by the Carnegie police today charged with murder in connection with the death of his landlord, Lawrence Szcrok, 45, of 2 Pine street, Carnegie, following what police said was a "drunken argument."

Police Chief Chris H. Keisling arrested Ollick late yesterday along Chartiers Creek about a quarter of a mile from the scene of the murder.

Keisling said Ollick told him:

"We were drinking and got in a fight. Szcrok got nervous and came at me with a knife and I took it and shoved it back at him. I couldn't help it."

In Ollick's vest pocket, Keisling said, he found an ordinary table knife, the blade partly cut off and the end of it sharpened.

Mrs. Katrina Szcrok, wife of the slain man, told the police that Ollick and her husband got in an argument and then started to fight.

In searching the house the police said they found a five-gallon still and four gallons of moonshine liquor. A pint of it, they said, was taken from Mrs. Szcrok's apron pocket.

Sneak Thief Takes $60 at Gas Station

Rodger Davis, of 110 West Stockton avenue, reported to North Side police last night that a sneak thief entered the Sunoco gasoline station, 110 South Main street, and took $60 from the cash register while he was servicing an automobile.

Fall Kills Inmate Of Home for Aged

Harry Barletto, 84, an inmate of the Home for Aged Protestants, Swissvale avenue, died yesterday from a fall in the institution, according to a coroner's report.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Oct. 30.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

What's the R. F. C. farm relief, and sportsmanship going to do about this? Oregon has a football team, and Washington has one, that played all year with the same eleven men, and beaten or tied everything on the Coast.

Will Rogers

The rules say everybody that had a uniform is eligible, that in case a player has a phone call, he can excuse himself for a few minutes, come back again, then if he has a luncheon engagement, can take time out for that, then if he sees an old friend in the stands, can send in a substitute while he chats with him.

Then of course in case of slight fatigue, he can come out and sleep a bit. But I don't want to criticise, they may be operating under the NRA. They are giving shorter hours and more work to more men.

Yours, WILL

Coal Miners See NRA as Promise of Utopia; Operators Fear 'Rampant Unionism' by Code

Bosses Form Unions To Fight Worker Organizations

This is the fourth of a series of articles discussing the past and the future of King Coal, in the light of unionism and the NRA code. The series will be continued tomorrow.

By HOWARD BROWNING

What's in a code?

That's what the coal industry is asking today and that's what hundreds of thousands of Pennsylvanians who've never seen the inside of a coal mine might well ask as they consider their future welfare.

Miner Ryan

For what's in a code—the NRA's coal code, to be specific — has a lot to do with their bread and butter.

Added dollars spent by coal miners and dividends paid by coal companies can go far towards restoring prosperity to this district. And that should make a glance at the coal code and the results of its inception worth while.

The workings of the code as to labor are more complete today than the other phases affecting marketing and competition. But even the labor provisions haven't taken complete hold, as yet.

A final showdown on the question of observance of the collective bargaining provisions of the code was due in Washington, today, with President Roosevelt expecting a report from the U. S. Steel Corporation, holding company of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, on negotiations with the United Mine Workers of America.

Anticipated NRA

Lacking a report of agreement between the captive Frick concern and the union, the President was expected to take direct action himself, possibly cutting the Gordian knot of tradition and even ordering Frick and other captive mines to recognize the union.

But that's months ahead of the start of the story, which begins with the passage of the National Industrial Recovery Act and its approval in June.

The NRA made it law that capital must deal with collectivized labor if labor wants to act collectively.

Coal miners who had hung on the edge of starvation since the union was forced out of the Western Pennsylvania fields took that as a new magna charta and as the promise of early Utopia.

But the operators feared it was the beginning of the end, the beginning, probably, of the encroachment of a new and ruthless power—the power of unionism rampant.

"Unionism rampant" was the farthest thing from the mind of the coal miner—he saw in the NRA a guarantee of the American ideal—the ideal of freedom and of economic well-being.

So by the time the bill had been passed and before the hearings on the code had started the mine fields, were in large part, organized.

But the operators were just as fast. Like the steel companies, when they saw the NRA about to pass, they organized company unions to forestall the introduction of outside unions.

They presented company union plans to the men and told the men to vote, not on the plans, but on representatives in accordance with the plans. Then they took every vote for a representative as a vote for the plan. Which was a nice point.

Instead of waiting for the code hearings to protest the company unions, non-recognition of the U. M. W. A., lack of checkweighmen and grievance committees, the men jumped the gun in July and struck.

It started in the Frick mines, captives producing coal for the exclusive use of their parent firm, U. S. Steel.

Strike Spreads

An accumulation of other grievances contributed to the trouble, which spread rapidly throughout Western Pennsylvania:

Near starvation; the Frick company's practice of charging men for relief which could be obtained from the county and state, free; the iron rule of coal companies determined to profit or cut losses at the expense of whoever stood in the way, including impoverished laborers.

Violence broke out. Several men were killed, many wounded. The union didn't indorse the strike, yet the men were striking for recognition of the United Mine Workers. And the companies stood adamant—the men were in company unions and the operators would not recognize outside unions.

The men felt they were taking the law into their own hands to make captives obey the law.

Eventually, Gov. Pinchot had to declare virtual martial law in the district and send in the National Guard. That quieted things.

The men returned to work pending the code hearings, after strong persuasion from Gov. Pinchot and President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the NRA.

The code was passed on September 18. It contains the now famed bargaining provision in these words:

"Employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing . . .

"No employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing or assisting a labor organization . . ."

The code establishes for the miners 40 hours as the maximum working time in one week and eight hours—exclusive of lunch time—for one day.

Bitter Battle

A basic scale of $4.60 a day, running higher in some districts and lower to as little as $3.40 a day in Alabama, Georgia and Southern Tennessee—not generally competing with Western Pennsylvania. That rate may seem low, but it's a raise to the coal miner.

Immediate investigation to determine the practicability of an even shorter day and week, of revising wage differentials and increasing wages and employment are promised.

The code had proved a bitter battle, with many operators fighting with might and main against the collective bargaining clause—but the United Mine Workers of America won—it was their day in court.

Three days later, on September 21, a group of operators and the United Mine Workers buried the hatchet, signed an agreement.

Known as the Appalachian Agreement, it recognized the union, set further pay scales and working conditions.

The Northern Coal Control Association and the Appalachian Coal Association signed for the operators. They represented almost 100 per cent of the commercial mines in Pennsylvania, Ohio, most of West Virginia, Virginia, Northern Tennessee and part of Kentucky.

President Roosevelt approved the agreement, which reaffirmed the determination of both sides to avoid strikes by referring disputes to the Bituminous Coal Labor Boards. There will be six of them in various districts of the country, composed of three members each—one each for the President, employers and employes.

All six will compose a national board which will handle appeals and disputes involving the whole country or the general public interest. And only the six presidential appointees will make decisions; the other members will act in an advisory capacity.

The impartiality of the board's voting membership is expected to give it much weight and prevent many a strike.

Showdown Today

The captive mines, led by the Frick Company, held aloof from the Appalachian Agreement, so the captive miners walked out again—they said they "hadn't gotten the break" promised by Gen. Johnson and President Roosevelt when they went back to work in August.

Commercial miners struck in sympathy.

There was some more violence and the industry was shut down throughout this part of the state. Rival union groups made efforts to organize, with the Workmen's Brotherhood, said by United Mine Workers to be a company union, claiming a majority of Frick men as members.

That is the union that announced last week it would return to work today, offering to accept deputy sheriff commissions to insure their being able to enter the mines.

The captives promised President Roosevelt to abide by the hours, working conditions and wages of the agreement and the code. Gen. Johnson thought that meant the checkoff, hoped the strike would end. On his interpretation, union officials urged the men back; they refused to go.

Martin Ryan, president of the Grindstone local, U. M. W. A. at Frick's Colonial No. 4 mine, emerged as a leader of many thousands, saying:

"If President Roosevelt will tell me this is recognition, I'll go back."

But President Roosevelt couldn't tell hm that because, of course, it wasn't. That was shown when captives refused the checkoff, deduction of union dues and assessments from miners' pay by the operators.

President Roosevelt arranged conferences between Thomas Moses, president of the Frick firm, and Philip Murray, international vice president of the union. Many of the commercial miners returned to their pits, but captive miners stayed out. The President said he would, himself, settle the

RIORDAN'S MEN TO INVESTIGATE CHARGES

Places Blacklisted in Spring Given Wards Again, Sleuth Says

Investigators from Chief County Investigator Leo Riordan's office today were preparing to make a check of foster homes of court wards reopened after being blacklisted by probers in last spring's investigators of alleged irregularities by foster parents.

Charges that the homes were receiving wards were made Saturday by W. E. Windhorst, in charge of county investigation. He said that 10 homes condemned have been allotted more children. Results of the investigations will be turned over to County Commissioners.

No complaints have been received by Judge Benjamin Lencher, of Juvenile Court, he said, adding:

"Many of the homes on probationary lists were merely closed temporarily until certain changes could be made. Of the latter, two have been reopened because I believe they are now good homes."

Windhorst charged that a home in Reserve Township had been given wards who were forced to peddle vegetables for profit of their caretakers, and had been deprived of nourishing foods. This home, he said, was among several reopened by Judge Lencher. It was closed June 27, but now has more wards. Of this home Judge Lencher said:

"That home was on the probationary list because the children were not given milk. The story of selling vegetables was not impressive. The boys did it for fur and made a little money out of it, so far as we could learn."

M'DADE HELD IN GIRL CASE

James E. McDade, 69, of 2215 Strauss street, a retired street car man, was held for court on a morality charge today after a hearing before Magistrate T. D. Jones, in Morals Court.

Two of four little girls pointed out the aged man as one who had molested them in an Elliott movie theater. Two others were not sure of his identity. He refused to testify on advice of his attorney.

A spectator at the hearing was Edward J. McDade, 24, owner of the theater, who is at liberty under bond on a manslaughter charge awaiting an inquest into the death of his wife, Grace. The latter, police say, leaped from McDade's car several weeks ago after the two quarreled over his alleged attentions to a 16-year-old girl.

Gold Refuses To Cool Off in Cold Storage

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Attorney General Cummings figures there were 5,000 hoarders pursing forty millions in gold. Most of the retrievers gave up the fellow birds.

There are still some tough clams who refuse to open their shells. That tooth-marked gold is no good to the hoarders for the government is only buying stuff fresh baked at the mines.

The boys would like to drive up and unload. But it's a tougher job than trying to buy a stranger's umbrella in the rain.

If you have gold you can't spend it. If you try to sell it you admit you have it. If you admit that to Washington then Atlanta will admit you.

The only consolation is that you can still save string and wrapping paper. There is no law against hiding a few large lumps of ambergris or stuffing a stovepipe with rubies and diamonds.

But don't put away your gold to cool off. It gets hotter.

Patricia Pitt

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

An artist, whose work is a revival of an art of the Renaissance, is in town for her exhibition in the Gillespie Galleries, to close Saturday night, and for sittings.

She is gracious Miss Ethel Mundy, who has done miniatures in colored wax of many Pittsburgh social registerite children and of some grown-ups, too.

Miss Mundy has her inspiration for her work in the European museum's examples surviving the Renaissance. The art was revived for a time in the Eighteenth Century and then forgotten.

She found a chemist who after much experimenting succeeded in making color in wax permanent.

Success Wins Fame

At the right there appears a photograph of Miss Mundy's medallion of little Sally Smith, daughter of the Theodore F. Smiths. And in the exhibit there is an exquisite medallion of the two little daughters of the Henry Allens. Mr. Allen, a former Pittsburgher, is the author of "Anthony Adverse."

Miss Mundy has just completed a portrait of the small blonde curly-headed son of the B. F. Jones III of Sewickley.

And she has done portraits of the children of the Junior W. L. Joneses, of the T. M. Jones III of the C. Dudley Armstrongs, Mrs. Harry Darlington, Jr., Mrs. T. Howe Nimick, the Braxton Heards, the George E. Mohlers, the T. J. Hilliards, Thomas Armstrong Robinson.

Little Susan and Virginia Burgwin the J. O. Burgwin daughters have sat for portraits by Miss Mundy and so have the Theodore F. Smiths' daughters, Sally and Diana, and the Herbert A. Mays' children.

Sally and Portraits

She did a portrait of Mrs. Lewis A. Park posed with one of her dogs.

Her most treasured compliment on her work came from a little boy, Miss Mundy told me. He looked at a portrait of a little girl, then asked his mother, "When's that little girl going to come down to play with me?"

Another little boy looked at his portrait with wonder. "Where's my other eye?" he demanded. Miss Mundy does profiles of all her subjects.

Children are charming, courteous sitters, the artist finds, but she likes to have someone amuse the child while she's working.

Cards have been mailed to 300 clubs in this district, inviting them to hold entertainments in the auditorium at the Association for the Blind, Craig street, and to make a tour of the institution. A BRILLIANT contrast to the nondescript coats one sees, is the Grabowsky coat, unique in design and fur treatment. It is from a group of "unforgetable" coats.

Through the Spyglass Viewing the New

Harken, oh spyglassers, to the sights and sounds we bring you today! 'Monost them you will find items to fill several corners of your heart. Call Grant 6500 and ask for the Spyglass to get the names of the shops. Or send a self-addressed stamped envelope.

* * *

With the advent of many ladies keeping up with the "I'm No Angel" sort of West-ianers, it's the most natural thing in the world for plush to be shoved into a front seat at the fashion show.

And now we see it made up into new "baby-bonnets" with off-the-face lines . . . or into berets . . . each with a matching Ascot or cowl-collar. In crushed plush resembling fur . . . black, white, or gray . . . and costing $10 the set.

How about a faithful Fido to sit beside you and loll a red tongue lovingly out one side of his mouth? We have found the doggiest dogs of many a kennel . . . brown and white velveteen ones which sit up in the approved "His-Master's Voice" attitude, and which the children would love. With lolling red tongues as we promised you. . . and raggedy-looking ears made of terry cloth! For only 25c!

* * *

Fee-fie-fo-fum . . . get ready to brandish your knife! There are some gay and glittering chromium plated bread trays to be had, together with a stainless steel knife, boasting marbleized handle . . . and the whole kit and posse of them for only $1, the set! One of the stores has apparently run completely amuck and is playing Santa Claus at an early date!

* * *

The chinless wonder . . . that will be you when you get into your coat and snuggle chin-deep in the fur collar we have discovered (that's how luxurious they are!) for you.

There is a shop which is making a specialty of fur collars and cuffs—leopard, fox, mink, beaver, badger and broadtail—at the most reasonable of prices. $5 up, to be exact! And a nice fur collar with matching cuffs might be just what you were minus to transform your old coat into a smart one!

* * *

Unless you want to stone-blind, sand-blind, high-gravel-blind (bows to Launcelot Gobbo) you'll take care of your reading lamps and the lights you use in them! We have just had a conclave with an authority on the subject, and have found that there is a special service being offered here in town which brings you the opportunity to have a specialist call at your home and test the readability, and seeability of your lighting. Quite an idea we think (it is a free service of course) and one which everyone should make use of!)

* * *

This being the day of hors d'oeuvres and smoergasbord (pardon us!) we hostesses have had to cast about for something to take the place of mere crackers. And the answer is Melba Toast. NOT the kind you painstakingly prepare over a hot oven yourselves . . . and which is too thick, or too brittle, or too something-er-other (like the Three Bears). THIS Melba Toast is "just right" . . . because it has been specially prepared . . . packed into neat little square boxes . . . and is ready to serve when and as you wish. 2 boxes for 35c . . . how's that for a cheering number, hostesses?

All Paris Mayfair Sees Sorel Music Hall Debut

PARIS.—Virtually all Paris Mayfair attended the initial appearance of 60-year-old Cecile Sorel before a music hall audience.

Chanel was there with her young and handsome fiance. She wore a black dress with a huge neckpiece of black feathers.

In preparation for her marriage, Chanel is making a complete break with the past. She is dismissing all the old employes and servants who date back to the days when she was reported engaged to the Duke of Westminster and is giving up the house where the famous English peer was so often a guest.

Lady Mendl sat in the third row. She wore a simple black dress with two ropes of pearls.

Mrs. Esmond O'Brien, daughter-in-law of Judge Morgan O'Brien, displayed the new manner of varnishing nails, all red with uneven halfmoons. She has them done three times a week.

Cecile's party would not have been complete without the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Walker.

Imperial Potentate John W. Sebrell, making his first official visit to Pittsburgh, was the honor guest today of Syria Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at its autumn ceremonial. He is being feted with an all-day program at which more than 5,000 Shriners are attending.

On a year's visit to all the Shrine temples in the United States and Canada, and having already visited every state in the Midwest and Middle Atlantic group, Potentate Sebrell said:

"Everywhere I go they tell me that business is much better. I think the people in the United States are determined to have better times. Such improvement comes from the inside and not from legislation alone."

The Shrine, he said, will continue building new hospitals. Pittsburgh, he added, is second on the list to receive one of the on the list to receive one.

"It is already planned that a Shrine hospital be built here. As soon as business gets better we are hoping that it will be started."

Tonight initiation of new Syria members will be held. Speakers will be Potentate Sebrell and Imperial Oriental Guide Walter S. Sugden, of Sistersville, W. Va.

Potentate Sebrell's home is in Norfolk, Va. In private life he is the city attorney and is now on a leave of absence.

5,000 ITALIANS WED SAME DAY

International News Service.

ROME, Oct. 30.—In a heroic measure designed by Premier Mussolini to spur an increase in the Italian population, more than 5,000 men and women, some of them in their teens, were married today in a unique series of wholesale nuptial ceremonies throughout the country.

In Rome alone, 700 couples were joined in matrimony, and the public made of the occasion a gala holiday.

In their march to myriad altars and their later triumphant processions through the streets of Rome, of Civita Vecchia, of Viterbe and elsewhere, the newlyweds enjoyed the blessings and congratulations of Il Duce, who presented each couple with a gift of money.

Virtually all the expenses incurred were paid by the government out of the revenues obtained from Il Duce's heavy tax on bachelordom. Flowers, music, colorful costumes and gifts of 1,000 lire banknotes all came out of the pockets of Italy's single men of marriageable age.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—The "shoe bandit" of Chicago, so named because he had forced victims to give up their shoes, finally put one of his feet into one of the wrong pair, the police said.

After depriving pedestrians of their shoes for some time he met Authur Olsteb yesterday. Olsteb was wearing a pair of smart shoes. The robber took them, and then proceeded to try them on. But he got only one shoe on when two police sergeants spotted him, and a chase began.

The robber, who identified himself as Stanley Stanek, 23, ran with one shoe on and three in his hands, but was captured.

SLIPPER DETAILS FOR NEW SHOES

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THAT "dressmaker" touch which all women fancy as the swank stamp of handwork on their better frocks has been borrowed by shoe designers who are keeping up nobly with the idea of more and dressier costumes in every woman's wardrobe. Kidskin especially has gone in for this treatment, actually taking pleating, stitchings, and even shirrings in its stride, and doing it all with a laudable restraint.

The slavish devotion to a fashion which groups its clothes in specific classes has done wonders for the colored shoe. Tints in kid that up to now have been limited to indoor or evening wear are now coming right out in the daytime with frocks that go all sorts of places that are fun, and they don't look the least bit too tricky, even for truly conservative matrons.

The bottle green broadcloth afternoon suit with luxurious trimmings of black lamb, for instance (and a lame blouse that makes the whole thing a very dressy costume) can be jacked to higher elegance by matching green shoes; and those lovely berry shades in very soft novelty woolens can be ensembled with heather kids that show them off. The usual black and brown plain shoes that would formerly have been chosen for these two outfits, respectively, would not do half so much for them, sartorially speaking.

The high-cut oxford remains in favor—and why not? It gives an aristocratic, arched silhouette to the foot, as any observant woman knows. There seems to be renewed pother about cut-out devices in the offing, too, which is another device very becoming to the foot. Asymmetric strap effects, and perforations that are grouped in geometrical motifs are other ways of the new shoes

The shoe sketched top is a black kid afternoon sandal with touches of black lizard detailing it. Second, a walking shoe in brown kidskin combined with heather kid, and fastened by three buckled straps. Third, a black kid side-laced oxford; fourth, a side-buttoned oxford in brown kid.

PITT, TECH SET GRID RECORD AGAINST NOTRE DAME

PITT GLORY UNDIMMED BY IRISH SLUMP

A single game won out of four played, against one tie and two straight defeats. A total of 12 points scored in four hours of football. It's hard to conceive that the holder of such a drab record is the usually mighty Notre Dame, and in view of the continued failures of the Irish is looks as though the expected clicking is not going to materialize and that, for this season at least, they have fallen to the level of being just another football team.

Mike Sebastian

But that detracts nothing from the glory of Pitt's great triumph last Saturday. The exhibition given by the Panthers would have beaten stronger teams than Notre Dame; the line that was inept against Minnesota was this time at the height of its game; Mike Sebastian came back from the obscurity of the bench to regain his place in the sun as the club's best halfback, and in general the team played a grade of football that has not been surpassed anywhere this season.

Dr. Sutherland, whose record of never having lost two Pitt games in succession still stands, did a great job of pointing, and it was largely because Pitt was so good, and not because Notre Dame was weak, that the Irish had to continue in the rut. In any event, the Panthers have placed a notable feat to their credit in defeating Notre Dame two years in succession. Three other schools have won two games in a row from the Irish since the dawn of Notre Dame's golden era on the gridiron—Nebraska, Southern California and Carnegie Tech, with an open year separating the latter's victories of 1926 and 1928—but only Pitt, in winning two straight, has held the South Benders scoreless both times.

SEBASTIAN OVERCOMES MENTAL HAZARD

The brilliant triumph leaves a big year still possible for Pitt, in spite of the Minnesota defeat, the outlook being made all the brighter by the return of Sebastian to form as one of the best halfbacks in the country. The way Mike redeemed and re-established himself was a delight to local fans, and ought to restore his self-confidence.

Sebastian's fumbling tendency was due largely to psychological reasons. So much had been made of his fumbles, while similar slips by other players were passed up, that Mike developed a mental hazard and came to believe that he just couldn't hold the ball. He has a new grip on himself now, after a game without mishap, and if the comics and wise-crackers, most of whom never undertook to handle a flying football themselves, only refrain from reminding him of his old habit, he may, to Pitt's advantage, finish out his career as brilliantly as he played last Saturday.

TIE WITH TECH MORE GLORY FOR W. & J.

It was no lucky break that gave W. & J. that scoreless tie with Carnegie Tech. As a matter of fact the Presidents were the better team of the day. They put the Tartans into an early hole and kept them there throughout the afternoon, outplaying them by a clear margin. It was another highly creditable achievement by the Prexies and their able coaches, Hank Day and Dave Morrow.

ZANINELLI POSSIBLE FUTURE ARMY PLAYER

Pittsburgh may send another football player to the United States Military Academy. Silvio Zaninelli, fullback on the Duquesne University team and one of the best punters in this part of the college map, may one day be booting 'em down the field for Army. The 194-pound line smasher, who came to Duquesne from Avella High School, and is now in his senior year, has set his heart on going to West Point, if possible, and if there is a vacancy before he reaches the age limit of 22, following his graduation from the Bluff school next spring, he will be prepared to buck competitive examinations and the like with all the vigor he now shows in ploughing into enemy walls on the gridiron.

Silvio Zaninelli

Should Zaninelli realize his ambition to be admitted to West Point for a military career, he naturally would be a candidate for the football team. So Pittsburgh and Avella may give Army another gridder, to be added to a list from this district that already includes Tiny Hewitt, fullback from Pitt; Paul Miller, center from Allegheny High, and Swavely, the latest of the local representatives: Ed Garbisch, center from W. & J.; Harry Wilson, halfback from Penn State, and Cy Letzelter, fullback from Carnegie Tech, who lost his team eligibility when a mistake was discovered in his registered age.

EASTERN SCHOOLS MAY DROP ONE OFFICIAL

According to a report from Boston, there is a movement under way for the big Eastern colleges to get together and use only three officials, instead of four, in all of their football games next year. Meanwhile, some of the coaches continue their criticism of a few of the present officials for recent blunders.

One says a notion they are above criticism has spread among some of Okeson's regularly used officials, and suggests that it would be a good thing to inject some new, fresh, alert blood into the group entrusted with running the big games.

CANZONERI BACK WHERE HE BEAT AGE RULE

When Tony Canzoneri defeated Frankie Klick at the Ridgewood Grove Sporting Club in Brooklyn last Saturday night, the former lightweight champion was reappearing after almost seven years in the arena where, on November 6, 1926, he fought his first 10-round bout and suffered his first loss of a decision. His opponent was Davy Abad, of Panama, it was the opening night of the club, and it was also Tony's birthday. Canzoneri was only 18 that day, but he gave his age as 21 and thus got away with three years at the expense of the New York Commission, which had, and still has, a rule prohibiting boxers under 21 from fighting more than six rounds. It follows that Tony will be only 25 next month, though according to the record books he will be 28.

Tony Canzoneri

When Canzoneri, three years after his Ridgewood debut, celebrated his genuine coming of age with a big party, boxing writers kidded the commissioners on having been fooled. This led to a check-up of all licensed fighters in New York and disclosed some amazing cheating on ages to beat the rule. The prize winner was the case of the three Silvers brothers—Joey, Pal and Babe. According to the birth certificates on file with the commission, all three brothers had been born within a period of four months.

PIRATES SCORE 16-14 VICTORY OVER BOSTON

BOSTON, Oct. 30. Pittsburgh's Pirates had a rousing triumph to their credit for their first showing in the East as a National Professional Football League entry today. The Pittsburghers defeated the Boston Redskins yesterday, 16 to 14, as they opened their Eastern invasion, which takes them on to Brooklyn for a game next week.

The Redskins, out to repeat the victory they scored over the Pirates earlier in the season, were only able to cash in on two of the five scoring chances that came their way during the conflict that remained unexciting until the last period, when the visitors turned back two sustained Boston marches.

BATTLES TALLIES

Boston opened the scoring in the first period after blocking a punt on Pittsburgh's 15-yard line. Cliff Battles, former West Virginia Wesleyan star, plunged for a first down and then ploughed over for a touchdown and Jim Musick place-kicked the seventh Boston point.

Halfway through the second period the Pirates moved from midfield via the air route, Tony Holm ending the parade by completing a scoring pass to Paul Moss. The try for the extra point failed, but later in the session, after both teams' overhead attack collapsed, Pittsburgh worked the ball down to the Redskins' 14-yard line, where Paul Engesbreiser put his team in the lead with a placement goal.

A 60-yard pass, Holm to Edgar Westfall, gave the Pirates another touchdown in the third quarter and in the finale, after being turned back twice, the Redskins marched 88 yards before Lou Weller made a scoring dash outside his right tackle.

In the dying moments of the game, Jim Music missed a try for a placement goal from the 35-yard line.

PIRATES GET HOHMER

President Art Rooney, of the Pirates, announced today that he had completed a deal with the Boston club whereby the Pirates secure Walter Hohmer, former Northwestern halfback star. Hohmer will join the Pirates at once. The lineup:

The Giants took a 7-to-0 lead in the first quarter. After clever plays by Harry Newman and Bo Molenda, Newman passed to Strong on the 12-yard line and the latter sprinted for a touchdown.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: ASTOUNDING FERTILITY—The Spanish mackerel lays a maximum of 1,800,000 eggs. In ideal conditions if all these eggs continued to hatch for five generations, the last would produce 10 septillion, 497 sextillion, 600 quintillion fish, of an average weight of 10 pounds each. Their total weight would equal 52 sextillion, 488 quintillion tons. The weight of the earth is 6 sextillion, 592 quintillion tons, so that the fifth generation of the Spanish mackerel would exceed the weight of the earth more than seven times.

DRASTIC BRUIN SHAKEUP LOOMS

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—(Universal)—Determined efforts of the new administration of the Chicago Cubs to salvage the fading prestige of the North Side baseball club, in keeping with the reconstruction policy and plans of the late William L. Veeck, make it possible today definitely to announce the following facts:

Charles (Chuck) Klein, baseball's greatest all-around outfielder, will wear a Cub uniform in 1934.

Chuck Hafey, another great outfielder, will perform with Klein.

Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, for years star outfielder of the Cubs, Outfielder Jim Mosolf and Pat Malone, veteran righthanded pitcher, go to the Cincinnati Reds in the Hafey deal.

Infielders Mark Koenig goes to the Philadelphia Nationals as part of the transaction that brings Klein to the Cubs. In addition the Phillies get $65,000 in cash and two other players, to be named later.

Floyd (Babe) Herman will be retained as an alternate and utility outfielder next season.

Official confirmation of these facts will be made in the normal course of events, and probably not later than January 2, 1934.

Moreover, Philip K. Wrigley will continue as president of the club.

NUGENT IN DARK

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Gerry Nugent, president of the Philadelphia Nationals, said he knew nothing of a reported deal involving the exchange of Charles (Chuck) Klein to the Chicago Cubs for three players and $65,000 in cash. Previously Nugent has denied he had been approached by the Cubs management concerning player deals.

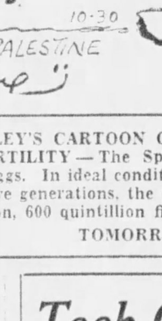
Tech Outplayed by W.-J., No Alibis—Harpster

By Howard Harpster

Carnegie Tech Football Coach; All-America Quarterback in 1928

Last Saturday, some 21,000 persons saw Coach Hank Day's fine W. & J. football team outplay, outgain and outfight Carnegie Tech at the Stadium, and about the only phase of the game in which our Tech team ended up even with the Presidents was in the matter of the score, the game ending in an 0-0 tie.

I have no alibis to offer for my team's inability to look impressive, and rather than attempt to give any reasons or excuses for not winning the game, I would prefer to be honest and admit that we were very fortunate in being able to come out of the game without being beaten. W. & J. had a fine football team on the field, just as it had in the opening game of the season against Pitt, and we at Tech frankly admit we were outplayed.



Howard Harpster

I expected just the sort of a game that it turned out to be, and felt all week that Tech would not reach the mental peak it did a week earlier against Notre Dame. Our boys were very anxious to win, and were as "set" for the game as anyone could expect them to be after the great fight of the week before. Against a team which was not as keyed up as W. & J., our boys perhaps would have played well enough to win, but against the fighting team from Little Washington the Tech team looked helpless. We looked bad for only one reason, and that was because W. & J. made us look that way.

PRAISES SEBASTIAN

Pitt made it two in a row over Notre Dame following up its 12-to-0 victory of a year ago with a 14-to-0 setback of the Irish. All of Pittsburgh was happy to see Mike Sebastian come through with his fine game-winning play. Mike has had tough luck all season with an attack of fumbleitis, and has been the subject of considerable criticism. When he stepped out on his 75-yard touchdown run at South Bend, he more than evened up for any loose ball handling in previous games.

Pitt's win, following on the heels of Notre Dame's defeat in Pittsburgh a week before, makes it appear as if the Irish are about to find out how it feels to lose a few games. With Purdue, Army, Southern California and a few other tough games to come, the Notre Damers easily can lose another game, or two or three.

Duquesne continued its winning streak when its second team easily defeated Westminster, Friday night, at Forbes Field. The Dukes' varsity had a rest and should be in an excellent spot for the W. & J. game next Saturday.

GENEVA LOSES AULTMAN

Jimmy Robertson's Geneva team kept its slate clean of defeat by winning over a scrappy St. Vincent College eleven at Beaver Falls, Friday night. The victory was the most costly any Geneva team has scored in recent years, for it sent Cliff Aultman to a hospital with a broken leg.

I have known Aultman ever since his high school days in Akron, and had the pleasure of coaching him for three years at Geneva. He is one of the finest boys I know, being very friendly and likeable.

As an all-round athlete I believe Aultman stands in a class by himself in Western Pennsylvania. I was very much grieved to learn of his unfortunate accident.

I'll be down to see you soon, Cliff.

HARRIS SIGNED BY RED SOX

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—The third step in the rebuilding of the Boston Red Sox, the gigantic task that Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins assumed last February when they took over that American League club, was taken when they announced that Stanley (Bucky) Harris had accepted a one-year managerial contract.

Harris, who resigned as manager of the Detroit Tigers early in September, said that he did not come to terms with Yawkey, the club president, until last Friday. Rumors that he would succeed Marty McManus, who assumed control of the club when John Collins abdicated on the road in the middle of the 1932 season, have been circulating for many weeks.

Harris, who quit a Pennsylvania coal mine to enter baseball in 1915, has piloted the Washington Senators, whom he led to two pennants and a world championship, and the Detroit Tigers. He was the youngest manager in major league baseball back in 1924, when, at the age of 27, Clark Griffith shocked the baseball world by naming him Donnie Bush's successor.

Auto Race Driver In Three Accidents

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Tommy Booker, Decatur, Ill., motor race driver, survived three major accidents and a threat of being struck by a train yesterday with no worse injury than a broken pelvis.

His racing car plowed through a fence at Ramona Speedway, and a timber piercing the radiator, fractured his pelvis.

The ambulance in which he was being taken to a hospital collided with two motor cars, shaking him and inflicting further shock.

The collision occurred on a bridge and the ambulance plunged down a 35-foot embankment to a railroad track below, where a train was momentarily due.

Booker was extricated immediately, however, and taken to a hospital where physicians said he had a good chance to recover.

PANTHER TEAM SHOWS CLASS IN VICTORY

By JESS CARVER

Well, you probably could not have sold any one the idea a month ago, but the fact remains that both of good old Papa Pittsburgh's football teams which had the chance, have taken a fall out of Notre Dame.

Your correspondent can't prove it but he's willing to lay a few bobs on the line that it is the first time in y'ars and y'ars that two universities from the same burg have knocked off the Irish in one season, to say nothing of successive weeks and without the Irish coming even close to scoring.

Now that the Panthers have annihilated the Ramblers in such decisive, to say nothing of impressive, fashion, it is exceedingly unfortunate that the Golden Panthers went haywire at Minneapolis a week ago against the Gophers. The Pitt team, from its little spark plug Howard (Hog Caller) O'Dell, to the lowest sub, did not realize until after the Notre Dame game at South Bend how greatly it had miscued in the game with Minnesota.

GOPHER DEFEAT TOUGH

Supposing the locals had defeated Minnesota (which they certainly should have) they would today unquestionably be at the very top of the Eastern, to say nothing of the national heap. Then Pittsburgh would have been right up there along with Army, Michigan, Southern California, Fordham and Duke. However, Dr. Sutherland's boys were as far off against Minnesota as they were "on" against Notre Dame. And they were "on" at South Bend on Saturday that they now have Mister Heartly (Hunk) Anderson laying plans for a campaign designed purely for character building and developing of a pair of offensive guards able to get out of their own way, to say nothing of ambitious Notre Dame ball carriers.

At this point, to dwell for a further paragraph or two on the Pitt-Notre Dame game, your correspondent would like to point out that Dr. Sutherland has turned out another of his great lines. The Panther forward wall ripped so savagely into the Irish line on Saturday that Jesse Harper, director of athletics at Notre Dame, was considering giving the Ramblers tickets of admission to the stands. The Irish line was scattered in 17 different directions, to say the least, by the hard and vicious charging Blue and Gold forwards.

The Pitt backs, led so admirably by Fullback Isadore Weinstock, took advantage of every opening. Few Pitt fullbacks have turned in more impressive performances than did Izzy on Saturday. The hefty fullbacker had more drive than a charity campaign. On one occasion, Weinstock power-housed his way through the center of the line on a spinner and after picking up four yards, was struck by Moose Krause and Don Elser. So great was the power in Weinstock's drive that he went an additional seven yards before Lukats came up fast from the safety position to bring him to earth.

PITT IN FORM

The Panthers made fewer mistakes of omission than they have for quite a spell; they were more alert, faster, smarter, and generally resembled a honest-to-goodness big league football team.

Carnegie Tech, "up" for the Notre Dame game, found Wash-Jeff tougher than Pitt did, and was held to a scoreless tie. Indeed, from all reports, the Tartans were fortunate to escape without being beaten. It was Wash-Jeff that made the big offensive gestures, fumbles inside the 15-yard line ruining what appeared to be certain touchdown drives.

At that, after having viewed both the Pitt and Tech-Notre Dame games, this department is of the opinion that it is not such a great feat to beat the Irish this year. The chances are that the Panthers and Tartans will have to share honors with at least two other elevens before the present campaign is over.

The Dukes, unbeaten and untied, now are in first place in what we laughingly have nicknamed our City Collegiate Football League, Ltd. Right now, the Bluffites are even bets against Pitt (and they wanted at least two to one on the Panthers against Notre Dame). Fast, well drilled, with a strong line and capable reserves, the Dukes look like the money. They figure to make it two in a row over Wash-Jeff this week . . . maybe beating the Presidents as decisively as they did a year ago, and it was 19-0 in '32.

The Dukes, who beat Westminster with a minimum of effort Friday night, as they figured to do, should be in fine physical trim for Wash-Jeff and for the first time in the history of their relations with the Prexies, will be the favorites. Oddly enough, Wash-Jeff has not been able to beat the locals since the inception of the modern relationship, although they'd entered both games on the long end of the wagering.

Geneva and Davis-Elkins remained in the unbeaten class among the smaller colleges, although the Scarlet Hurricane was held to a 7-7 draw by West Virginia. The Covenanters downed St. Vincent, but suffered a serious loss when Cliff Aultman, brilliant end, broke his leg.

CUE TOURNEY OPENS

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Ten of the leading players in the country will compete in the national pocket billiard championship tournament opening here tonight. The winner of the title here will receive a $2,500 prize and a diamond-studded emblem, and with the second and third place finishers will be eligible to compete for the world championship against Ralph Greenleaf, the champion, and others at a tournament at Chicago in December.

STARTLING UPSETS MARK SCHOOL BATTLES

LOCAL ELEVENS SETTLE RACES THIS WEEK

By JULIUS LEVIN

Scholastic football teams of Western Pennsylvania have emerged from another turbulent weekend with a number of the favored elevens nursing bruises and aches as a result of startling upsets in the championship races.

The City League, having escaped the upheavals which marked the early stages of the football campaign in the W. P. I. A. L., was furnished its biggest upset on Friday when South High School, favorite to win the Section I crown, bowed before a scrappy Peabody eleven, thereby sending the East Enders into a deadlock with Allderdice for first place.

As a result of this setback, coupled with the fact that Perry checked the three-game winning streak of Carrick in Section II, by holding Ted Lyons' gridders to a 7-7 draw, considerable importance is added to the City League schedule for this week.

LEADERS MEET FRIDAY

The fireworks will get under way on Friday when South Hills meets Carrick on Langley Field. A victory for the Tunnelites will just about clinch the title for Mazeski's boys, while if Carrick wins, Lyons' team will be the Section II representative in the post-season playoff for the City crown.

A similar situation prevails in Section I with two important games listed for disposal on Friday. Allderdice must beat South at Allderdice to remain in the running, while Peabody must conquer Westinghouse. A victory for South and a defeat for Peabody will send Washabaugh's eleven back into first place with little or no chance of preventing it from meeting the Section II champ for the City laurels.

No changes were recorded among the leaders in class AA, class A or class B during the past week-end, although a number of upsets marked the races in these divisions.

LEADERS BEATEN

New Kensington High School, sharing the lead with New Castle in the double A chase with three victories and no defeats, suffered its first setback in a non-league fray, losing to Tarentum. New Kensington will meet New Castle Saturday in a game that will break the deadlock for first place. New Castle, defeating Youngstown Chaney in a non-league game, recorded its eighteenth straight victory.

Jeannette and Ambridge, like New Castle, kept their winning streaks intact. Jeannette beating Braddock for its seventeenth straight victory, while Ambridge handed Aliquippa a 19-7 setback for its fifteenth in a row. The last-named game marked the first time the Bridgers, defending class A champions, were scored on in six games this season.

New Kensington was not the only class AA team to feel the wrath of an outside opponent. Norwin, McKeesport, Charleroi and Clairton being defeated, while Wilkinsburg was held to a draw by Swissvale. Norwin lost to Scott, McKeesport to Uniontown, Charleroi to California and Clairton to Donora.

LEECHBURG CHECKED

Derry Township, undefeated and unscored on by a class A team, saw its record shattered by Hurst High, of Mt. Pleasant Township. Derry had won four straight games following a defeat by East Huntingdon, a class B team.

Leechburg, striving to get into the running for the class B championship by adding sufficient class opponents to its schedule, saw its efforts go for naught when its lost to Ramsey High, of Mt. Pleasant, also a contender, 12-0. Leechburg did not confine its winning streak to class B foes alone, its five-game string including two triumphs at the expense of class A opponents. It marked the first time Forrest Ford's team was scored on this season.

The list of contenders for the class A crown will be reduced Friday afternoon when Scott and Duquesne, both undefeated, tangle at Duquesne.

Commenting on reports that Uniontown would no longer meet McKeesport on the gridiron, R. D. Mosier, Uniontown High School principal, said last night that no official decision to cancel athletic relations with the Tubers had been made so far. He said:

"We think there were two sides to the question. We don't approve of our boys slugging or being slugged."

Brouillard, Dundee Meet for Title

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—The middleweight title of brawny Lou Brouillard will be at stake tonight when he engages Vince Dundee, Baltimore battler, in a 15-round joust at the Boston Garden.

The French-Canadian, a crouching, boring fighter who fires his rear gun from the port side, was expected to turn back Dundee, but the latter had different expectations. Dundee holds a decision over Johnny Indrisano. Boston will-o-the-wisp, who once gave Lou a boxing lesson.

CRITICS SCORED BY NEALE

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Striking back at critics who have been demanding his removal as football coach at West Virginia University, Coach Earle (Greasy) Neale asserted today:

"My professional record as a football coach is a mtter of record, both at West Virginia University and elsewhere.

"What becomes of me is very largely my own affair, but I desire to submit that the chatter of the last few weeks regarding the present and future coaching personnel of West Virginia University is poor psychology so far as the players are concerned and in bad taste, as well as ill-advised, so far as the best interests of the university are concerned."

SPORT VIGNETTES

It just goes to show what a fellow like Mike Sebastian will do when they put him on the spot, as Pitt did in its 14-0 game with Notre Dame last Saturday . . . There's a story right out of the fiction pages . . . A former star halfback doesn't start the game . . . He's benched because he'd been doing a lot of fumbling for one reason and another . . . Sometimes a bad pass from center, sometimes a tendency to fight the ball . . . Anyway, he's fumbling, so they tell him he's not a regular any more . . . Then they put him in as a sub with the going tough and he breaks away and runs 75 yards for a touchdown to break the ice and then he snags a pass and puts the ball in position for another tally, and the game's on ice against a team he whipped in similar fashion a year before.

Somehow, this column feels it owes a debt of gratitude to Mike, for wasn't it only last Wednesday that these lines were lamenting the fact that good old Mike was on the bench and expressing confidence that he would come back with a bang if given a chance, adding: . . . . "That's why we'd like to see Mike, a hard worker, get the call to enter the game against Notre Dame at some time next Saturday and come through in a tough spot. . . . . Maybe he needs some sort of a shock to pull him together and make him the star he was. . . . But we're sure everybody hasn't given up on him, and now's the time to let him know it. . . . Go get 'em, you, Mike!" . . . Well, Mike got his chance on Saturday, and he went out and got 'em. . . . He just as easily could have made a bum out of us by falling down, but he didn't, and that's why now we're rooting for him to keep on going out and getting 'em. . . . He ought to have his old confidence back by this time, and a confident Sebastion will look that ball in the eye and say, "Come to papa—who's afraid of the Big, Bad Fumble!"

The "shoot the works" policy of W. & J. cost it a victory over the still-unscored-upon Carnegie Tech football team in their scoreless tie at the Stadium Saturday . . . Twice, once at the start of each half, the Presidents worked their way inside the 10-yard line, the first time on a march of 49 yards and the second time on a drive of 71 yards, and were in a position to kick a field goal, but, instead, they adhered to a policy of a touchdown or nothing, and missed . . . The first time a wide run around right end resulted in a fumble and the loss of the ball and the second time a sweep around left end brought a big loss and a pass over the goal line on final down . . . Then, in the final half-minute, Tech miscalculated the time remaining and, with the ball on the 27-yard line on the right side of the field, tried an almost impossible placement on first down, and W. & J. had time to throw two passes before the finish . . . A play to bring the ball over in front of the goal posts would have given the Tartans a better shot at the cross-bar

Below the form that enabled it to defeat Temple and Notre Dame, Tech was fortunate to escape its first defeat of the season against the Presidents, who outplayed it consistently, outgaining the locals and effectively choking off the forward-passing attack of the Harpsterites . . . Next Saturday, W. & J., with a record of having held Pitt scoreless until within three and one-half minutes of the finish and having played a scoreless tie with Tech, meets Duquesne University at Little Washington . . . It is the big game of the day for the district teams, as Pitt plays Centre at the Stadium and Tech plays Purdue at Lafayette, Ind. . . . If Duquesne, with the best team in its history, can better Pitt's score against the Red and Black, it will be sitting in a fine position for its battle with Pitt at the Stadium a week later, and may go on to win the local championship . . . A victory over the Panthers will not be outside the realm of possibility . . . Tech plays Pitt in the season finale on Thanksgiving Day, and almost anything may happen in that engagement . . . The Dukes, undefeated and untied in seven games, have a great incentive before them, one that even may lead to a Tournament of Roses bid, which certainly would exceed the dreams of their fondest admirers . . . Coach Elmer Layden should have no difficulty arousing his charges for these crucial next two games.—HARRY KECK.

AN OLD TAD DISSENTS

Note—John J. McGraw, in an interview, stated that unlike the old days, young men of Irish-American families show a tendency to forsake baseball for the more important callings.

High in the seats of the mighty,
Boys of the Emerald Isle,
Doctors and lawyers and statesmen,
All the professions worth while;
Building up fortunes and mansions,
Wearin' thim two-gallon hats,
Tryin' to smile all the time you
Feel like the divvil in spats.
Farley, McCooey and Hurley,
Coyne and McKee and O'Brin.
Gettin' your names in the papers,
Runnin' for Mayor or flyin';
Cultured ye are now, they're sayin',
Strong with ambition to rule—

But you'd all love to croon
To the swing o' this tune:
Cronin an' Ry'n an' O'Doul!

After they had learned that George Gibson had been re-appointed manager of the Pirates, a dozen employes of the Oakland branch of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company wired a message of congratulation to the pilot who is visiting his daughter's family in Texas. Each of the signers of the congratulatory note was happy today in the receipt of a card of thanks from Gibson. It would seem that the tide had turned definitely in favor of Gibby in the local sector.

The red ink in the ledgers of the two Philadelphia ball clubs is solely responsible for the desire of Connie Mack and Gerry Nugent to transfer superstars for cash considerations. Chuck Klein is said to be headed for Chicago, where he would still have a short right fence at which to shoot.

Klein's home-run act apparently would not go over so well in Pittsburgh. Chuck did not hit a single round-tripper in the Oakland Orchard last year. Nevertheless, he's a good country ballplayer.

Heidelberg and Morgan successfully advanced in the National challenge cup soccer competition yesterday afternoon, Heidelberg defeating Moon Run on the latter's grounds, 4 to 0, while Morgan nosed out the Castle Shannon Hiehls, 1-0, at Morgan.

Felix Mitchell was the hero of the Morgan game. After a scoreless first half, Mitchell got away for a solo effort early in the second half, cleared the halfbacks and fullbacks, and his parting shot never gave Brunetti a chance to save.

At Moon Run, the Green and Gold-clad Heidelberg team clicked for the first time this season. Ably led by Stanley Kuten, who scored two goals, the former National amateur champion played brilliant soccer and fully deserved to win. The challenge cup lineups:

A few weeks ago, Reds Barry, Washington (D. C.) heavyweight, fought a draw with Charley Belanger, the Canadian light-heavyweight champion. Last summer this same Belanger handed Sunny Jim McVey, our Negro heavyweight thumper, a beating at Hickey Park.

So what? So they've matched Reds and Jim for the main bout at the Moose Temple tonight. The complaint has been that Jim has been having a lot of setups recently, and the fans want to see him matched with a young fellow who can and will stand up and trade punches with him.

Reds has been in there with the likes of Isadoro Gastanaga, Unknown Winston, Jack McCarthy, Frankie Simms, Hans Birkie, Natie Brown, Al Massey and Arthur Huttick, in addition to Belanger, so he ought to be able to qualify. This is the first really good-looking main bout since the Moose reopened for boxing, three weeks ago, and it ought to be reflected in the attendance tonight.

BUTCH VS. SARRON NEXT

Next week, Mose Butch, local southpaw featherweight, goes to the post against Petey Sarron, stablemate of Barry, who knocked out Johnny Datto in a single round at the Arena last season, so it appears that the downtown club finally has hit its stride and ought to clean up the deficits of the last two weeks in short order.

At the same time, there is talk of the Arena, on the North Side, being reopened soon, with Jules Beck on the job as promoter, and the deal for the razing of Motor Square Garden to make way for a mammoth new sports plant seems to have fallen through and we may have some more fistic offerings there following the constable's sale of effects of the present lease holder on Wednesday.

YAROSZ VS. TERRY AGAIN

A return bout between Ted Yarosz and Young Terry, who received a decision over the Monaca middleweight, may be forthcoming soon at the Garden. Clippings from Newark (N. J.) newspapers just received indicate that the decision against Yarosz there last Wednesday night was one of those things, Teddy having had a substantial margin throughout the bout, and Yarosz is anxious to get Terry in his own back yard and show the home folks that it was all a mistake.

Heavyweights also are billed for the eight-round semi-final tonight, with Curley Klaas, of the North Side, meeting Mike Mitchell, of Bellaire, O. Dominick Mancini, of the North Side, boxes Dick Ambrose and Jimmy Loizes meets George Smith in the two six-round preliminaries.

The show gets under way at 8:30.

PITTSBURGH BUYERS' GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

DUKES RATED WITH GRID LEADERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Sectional football championships still were far from final solution today as major powers slid toward the first November engagements, but the contenders had been cut to more reasonable numbers.

On the basis of records leading challengers for major crowns lined up about as follows:

Big Ten—Michigan the favorite, trailed by Illinois, Purdue and Minnesota.

East—No definite ratings possible in so many as a group, but Fordham, Army, Princeton, Holy Cross and Dartmouth look best.

Pacific Coast—Oregon, Southern California and Oregon State the only remaining contenders.

Southeastern—Still a wide open fight among Georgia, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, Vanderbilt and Louisiana State.

Southern—Duke and South Carolina threatened only by Washington and Lee and North Carolina.

Southwest—Arkansas and Texas alone survive.

Big Six—Nebraska stands alone.

Rocky Mountain—Utah still the team to beat with Denver and the Colorado Aggies the sole challengers.

Missouri Valley—Oklahoma A. and M. alone blocks Drake's path to the title.

NOTRE DAME UNDISMAYED

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 30.—(AP.)—There is no crepe on the golden dome of Notre Dame that reflects the rays of an Indian summer sun above the colorful autumn foliage of the university campus. The football team has lost two straight games without so much as scoring a point, and Notre Dame's gridiron fortunes for the time being are at the lowest ebb they have known in many a harvest moon, but truth compels the observation that the effects appear less serious to those within than to a host of others outside the university.

Whatever may be done about it after the conclusion of the 1933 season, Notre Dame still has its head up on the gridiron and the campus, its loyalty to the team undiminished by the shock of a losing "streak" and the feeling that something yet may be pulled out of the current wreck.

RETAINS BALANCE

In short, the proof is at hand that Notre Dame can "take it."

Father John S. O'Hara, acting president, said today:

"Notre Dame has a background and tradition that extends over 91 years. There is not the slightest chance of our losing a sense of balance and proportion merely because we lose a few football games. We have lost them before, then, as now, in good spirit. Rockne's team of 1928 lost four games without the world coming to an end. In fact, I believe that team enjoyed its season and got equally as much, if not out of it than some of our unbeaten teams. I have the feeling personally that the 1933 team will find itself before the season is over and give a good account of itself. Certainly, it would be foolhardy now for us to consider any premature surgery; the fact is we have none in mind."

NOT PANICKY—HARPER

Athletic Director Jesse Harper said:

"I would be less than frank if I did not say we want to win and turn out the best football team we can produce. At the same time, we know how to take defeat gracefully and sustain or develop the football relationships that mean so much to Notre Dame from coast to coast. As long as Anderson is coaching the team, he has 100 per cent support from me and the entire university. We are not panicky."

Auto Racer Killed In Coast Smash

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—A small fire in the last event at the Ascot Speedway yesterday killed Ernie Stanley, youthful pilot. Stanley was standing on the footboard, plowed through a railing and plunged down the embankment, pinning him underneath.

Rex Mays of Riverside, Cal., won the 62½-mile feature event in 38 minutes 9.60 seconds.

Forbes

Prices Rise, But Business Is Hesitating

—By B. C. FORBES—

WHICH IS right?

The Federal Reserve board reports that business lately has been slipping back. NRA Johnson contradicting vows that it has been going ahead in all directions except steel.

Mr. Forbes

Unfortunately, the weight of evidence is that the Reserve Board is right.

PRICES last week rose, but not due to any sudden pronounced spurt in trade or industry.

The main cause was announcement of President Roosevelt's plan to buy gold at (apparently) higher than world prices for the metal. Each day Washington named an advancing quotation, always somewhat above the foreign figure.

By the end of the week the American price was $31.82 an ounce, compared with $30.57 in London, a difference of 4 per cent.

Whether our government intends to bid high enough to attract imports of gold from Europe and elsewhere has not been revealed. Indeed, nobody professes to know just what course the President proposes to follow.

There is only guesswork as to how far he will send the domestic price of gold above the foreign price and also as to what will be his policy in stabilizing or manipulating the international value of the dollar.

Europe has already set a price on the dollar in line with its own gold price rather than in conformity with the American gold price. Europeans claim that if Washington confines its gold purchases to the output from American mines, the currencies of the rest of the world will be little affected.

NEVERTHELESS, the daily lifting of the gold quotation here has had unmistakable influence upon the more mercurial things traded in on the principal exchanges.

Stocks skyrocketed more than 10 per cent, a rather extraordinary gain. Grains closed the week from 5 to 8 cents a bushel higher.

Cotton climbed approximately ½ cent a pound, copper enjoyed a boomlet, silver rebounded, lead and tin strengthened, rubber was distinctly strong, although this last commodity was helped by rumors of an influential foreign agreement to regulate marketing.

The shrinkage in the gold value of the dollar, amounting to approximately four cents, had a depressing effect on domestic bonds and the opposite effect on foreign bonds dealt in here.

THE PRESIDENT having reiterated his determination to force prices higher in this country by one means or another, speculators and even investors have been disposed to buy common shares and staple commodities since the stepping-up of the gold price began.

The prevailing inclination at present is to believe that Washington intends to go to any length necessary to achieve its avowed objective.

Therefore speculators and investors are "getting aboard," even though some of them aren't altogether sure that general business recovery will make progress.

After all, volume is essential to prosperity and normal employment.

AS RECORDED here, many large employers turned apprehensive several weeks ago. Among other things which influenced them was the attitude of NRA officials toward labor unionism and labor disputes.

September-October wholesale orders diminished. Retailers found consumers not in a mood to pay the advances in prices necessitated by increased costs under NRA codes.

Improvement in sentiment is now reported from some centers. It may be, therefore, that November will bring a chance for the better, especially should shares and commodities and raw materials keep on advancing.

WASHINGTON is busier than ever striving to placate farm "strike" by expediting the distribution of bounties by prodigious mortgaged farmers by rushing us to buy wheat and cotton what markets whatever by promising to lend 50 cents a bushel on corn put into warehouse, to exempt all small businesses in rural communities under 2,500 population (a concession presumably forced on Administrator Johnson) from NRA rules and regulations, by promising wholesale distribution of cash deposits in closed banks, etc.

County Washingtons chief concern at the moment is to modify disparities farmers.

MEANWHILE industry and business desire to see convincing signs that Washington is alive to the importance of making possible the earning of the money necessary to pay higher wages for shorter hours and other increased costs.

Moreover, farm purchasers are not yet out and labor problems are prospective.

ON THE whole, however, there appears to be a growing spirit of hopefulness that the worst is behind America.

GOLD PROGRAM SWAYS BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—(AP.)—The bond market was afflicted with inflationary indecision during the past week with the result that price trends were generally contradictory and the list as a whole recorded little or no progress.

The most important news of the week was the President's announcement of his gold control program and plans for a managed currency as a means of raising and maintaining commodity prices. Increasing the price of gold, and thus depreciating further the value of the dollar, it was felt, would give a much needed lift to hesitant agricultural products. At the same time it was believed that wide and harmful fluctuations of the dollar in foreign exchange markets could be prevented.

Prime investment bonds immediately declined in response to the inflationary implications of the dollar depreciation plan and secondary issues rallied briskly.

TADERS PERPLEXED

With the initial increase in gold prices, foreign currencies soared during the early part of the week, but they turned downward later and even secondary bonds and stocks showed a waning of enthusiasm. Traders, consequently, exhibited a high degree of perplexity regarding the ultimate results of the gold control scheme.

Along with high grade corporate issues, United States government securities were soft, most of them sagging around half a point. The Federal Reserve system again reduced its open market purchases of "governments" when the reserves of member banks reached a high point at some $850,000,000. The conversion of Liberty Fourth 4¼s into the new 4¼-3¼s proceed at a moderate pace.

FOREIGN LIST STRONG

That several foreign governments may have the idea of converting their dollar loans was indicated when Sweden announced an offer to refund some $60,000,000 of its listed 5½ per cent issue into 3½ per cent kroner obligations. These bonds spurted, but reacted later under profit taking. Banking circles expected that Italy would be the next to try a conversion of its 7 per cent issue, of which around $87,000,000 is outstanding. Owing to the low dollar rates, and consequent high foreign exchange prices, refunding operations, bankers believed might be profitable to both governments and bondholders. Loans of most of the gold standard countries registered substantial net gains.

The industrial picture showed little change, although retailing activity picked up and hope was held out by week-end reviews for further progress in trade.

Ickes Orders Watch For Oil Violators

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Secretary Ickes, oil administrator, has instructed government officials to keep close watch on violators of "hot oil" regulations.

Although there have been reports received here of a number of violations of the regulations, Mr. Ickes said there was no particular case in mind for prosecution at this time.

Writers Tell Investment Bankers How to Win Back Public Faith

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Oct. 30.—Security underwriters from all parts of the country, faced with a ruinous law and still smarting from Washington investigations of their business practices, today took an unprecendented step. They asked newspapermen to tell them how they can regain public confidence.

Financial news men at the twenty-second annual convention of the Investment Bankers' Association of America here were asked to participate in a forum on news and advertising as educational essentials in the business occurred.

Overwhelmed by general public condemnation and distrust, the leaders in the business of creating stocks and bonds asked press representatives to tell them what to do. They were told in brutal terms and they liked it.

* * *

Told Solution Rests With Themselves

THEY WERE told that the solution lies entirely with the investment bankers themselves. Newspaper men praised the ideals and the policies of the association but they pointed out that individual members must conform in their practices with the principles laid down by the organization representing them.

They were told that they must improve their business practices and that they must do the job themselves if they wish to keep federal agencies from doing it for them and doing it in an unsympathetic and harmful manner.

P. Erskine Wood, of G. M. P. Murphy and Company, New York, was leader of the forum. He declared there is a real need for a federal securities law. He pointed to the efforts of the association to bring about legal reforms in the past.

But, in admitting the need for a federal securities law, he declared that members of his profession feel that certain changes are necessary. Edson B. Smith, financial editor of the Boston Herald, declared:

"Reform must come from the bankers if they are to get changes in the federal securities law."

* * *

New York Leadership Blamed for Troubles

HE SAID the investment bankers have lost public confidence, saying the antagonism of Washington is a symbol of this lack of confidence. He said the securities act is a bad law, but it reflects the fact that many of the offerings previous to 1929 lacked proper security.

Investment bankers in smaller cities are victims of New York leadership, according to Smith, who said the mistakes were not those of the local dealers.

The mistakes, he declared, were made by the New York originators. He expressed the opinion that the country cannot have true business recovery until it becomes possible to sell new securities.

Royal F. Monger, financial editor of the Chicago Daily News, declared investment bankers must follow the principles laid down by the association. He pointed to the fact that a committee report at a convention several years ago disapproved of real estate bonds. It severely criticized the small equities left to protect securities of this type.

He said:

"The association did not shout about this. It condemned it, but it did not force it on the public attention.

"The business must regulate itself."

Frequent Information On Earnings Demanded

P. S. HANNA, managing editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, declared investment bankers, when underwriting securities, should make it a part of the contract that the corporations agree to furnish information on earnings and other relevant developments at specified intervals.

Arthur H. Dean, of the law firm of Sullivan & Cromwell, New York, said investment bankers must convince the public that they are not simply yelping about the securities act—that there is a real need for their work. The public will not be flim-flammed again, he warned.

He said the securities act was put through during a period of public hysteria and that the investment bankers must take the public into their confidence if they are to have the undesirable features changed.

RALLY ON GOLD BUYING MOVE SOON HALTS

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Last week, an oversold condition was disclosed by the President's gold-buying move, and stocks rallied 4-6 points.

As anticipated, however, the rally lacked sustained power, and was halted at the level which had been the low for the July and September reactions.

There it has stuck for four days. Very little buying has come in, and a good deal of stock seems to be for sale at this level.

Such stock is doubtless coming from those who bought to support the market on preceding breaks and found themselves unable to get out, as well as from those who bought in the hope of more sustained rallies than have occurred.

PUBLIC STAYING OUT

Unless some strongly inflationary step is announced from Washington, there seems to be small chance of much higher prices. The public is not coming in, and those who are in are mostly hooked and locked in with "inflation stocks" or stale holdings which show sizable paper losses.

Certainly there is nothing in the business situation to suggest the development of any bullish interest in the market. Business as a whole is distinctly poorer, and NRA confusion and lack of confidence are growing.

The market remains caught in a "descending triangle," and it would take very definite steps to depreciate the dollar further, to cause much buying of equities.

I can see no hurry as being desirable in buying any stocks. It seems a fairly good bet, however, to maintain holdings on such "inflation stocks" as have any real merit in themselves, on the chances of further currency depreciation.

Sound dividend paying issues which are well down from their summer highs may as well be held through on an investment basis.

But trading commitments at present are too dangerous for the little man.

While it continues to seem probable that the administration will be forced to resort to drastic inflation, it still clings to the ill-advised NRA experiment, with the result that we may have to go through a period of clashes, attempts at coercion, and business disturbance before finally taking the inflation road.

ACTION MAY BE FORCED

Thus it is too easily possible that the October lows may be tested again, to warrant commitments here. As long as the President shows a tendency to cling to NRA as a "recovery" measure and to hold back inflation, sharp reactions are bound to occur.

But he may be driven to do something spectacular with his new gold fixing "policy" at any time.

So at the moment we remain in a condition of complete uncertainty.

I can see at least four different possibilities, and can see no strong probability which one will develope.

1—A little technical rally soon, followed by a five or six point reaction, and then by an inflationary rise.

2—An early reaction to the preceding low level, followed by a rather narrow trading range of several weeks.

3—After a little further hesitation here, some Washington "policy" may bring another jump, like the last one.

4—With no change at Washington and increasing NRA disturbances, the market might work irregularly lower and finally break to new lows.

The things to watch are the volume of trading, and commodity prices. If volume picks up on any strong spots today or tomorrow, it will be a distinctly bullish indication. The same would be true of a rise in commodity prices.

Miners See Utopia Hope In Rules of NRA

matter if Moses and Murray didn't agree.

The conferences stopped at the end of the second; soon Murray charged Moses with quibbling, delay, evasion.

There was to be a showdown today, with President Roosevelt demanding a report of negotiations. And failing a satisfactory showing of progress, some captive miners frankly expected to be forced to recognize the United Mine Workers of America.

Gives Square Deal

Meanwhile, there is still some unrest, bickering between operators and men, misunderstanding of the code and the agreement. On the whole, however, the fields are settling into the union harness.

But the strike and the confusion and the death and violence aren't all the answers to that question:

"What's in a code?"

Look deeper for the intent of the labor provisions of the NRA coal code and you'll find this in it:

A plan to stabilize and equalize labor costs of all coal fields, North and South and West and East, which would bring Western Pennsylvania's mining costs nearer to Southern costs.

A plan to raise the income and living standards of 500,000 miners—90,000 of them in Western Pennsylvania—who would spend their money for commodities to the eventual betterment of the entire country. Western Pennsylvania would certainly benefit mightily.

A plan to insure the miners a square deal in the future by giving them the club of collective bargaining—unionism.

A plan to protect the operators from cut-throat competition by stabilizing wages.

But those are plans. The actual workings of the NRA can't be forecast from the labor provisions of the code alone.

STEEL AWAITS U. S. ACTION

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Steelmakers were represented by the magazine Steel today as looking farther into the future for substantial improvement in demand, believing that only a combination of public works, railroad and automotive requirements can induct a vigorous rebound in operations.

The weekly review went on:

"That the decline which carried the steel rate down to 30 per cent during the past week will be arrested soon as possible, if from no other reason than the exhaustion of general consumers' stocks seems apparent. But for a strong comeback much depends on how soon the government's plans can be matured into steel orders.

"Failure of federal recovery programs to sustain manufacturing enterprises dependent on steel, and interruptions due to strikes principally in the automotive industry, accentuates the seasonal slowing in production, is discouraging to steelmakers."

STOCKS, AFTER RISE, DRIFT AIMLESSLY

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—Announcement that the United States would enter foreign gold markets as a buyer brought a mild revival of inflationary psychology in stocks and staples today, but enthusiasm soon cooled and prices settled down to a rather dull drift.

Boardrooms seemingly were undecided as to the immediate bullishness or bearishness of the new move for dollar depreciation and traders, after an industrial flurry, adjourned to neutral territory to await further developments. Some of the mining shares were in moderate demand, but other categories displayed no particular trend. Grains were firm, but not buoyant. Little attention was paid to a sharp rally of European exchanges against the American monetary unit. Sterling was up about 6 cents and French francs gained about .12 of a cent. Prime investment bonds were a bit heavy.

Among share gainers of fractions to around a point were American Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine, Alaska Juneau, Dome, U. S. Smelting, Chrysler, Case and Allied Chemical. U. S. Steel and American Telephone were virtually unchanged and small declines were suffered by N. Y. Central, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, International Harvester, Johns-Manville, American Can and others.

Banking and brokerage opinion of Washington's latest gold step was mixed, although there was an apparent concensus that the administration would leave nothing undone to put up commodity prices to levels where the agricultural section can begin to pay debts and buy goods.

It was generally felt that the United States would not enter into any wild bidding for gold in foreign centers and that, in one way or another, there might be some co-operation with Great Britain. What some financiers fear, however, is that if Washington operates independently of London, the British may start a retaliatory move to protect the pound which could bring serious international repercussions, including the forcing of France, together with the other gold standard countries, off the metallic base.

There were many conjectures as to just how the Federal Reserve System, as the foreign gold buying and selling agent of the R. F. C., would conduct transactions. The Bank of England, in manipulating sterling through its huge equalization fund, does not make public its operations partly because it does not wish to encourage speculation which probably would follow any announcement, or intimation, that the bank was in the exchange market either as a buyer or seller. In banking quarters here it was reported that the British bank, when the R. F. C. started to raise the domestic gold price, co-operated with the Bank of France and actually bought dollars in order to hold down the two leading exchanges.

Second Well Hits On Barco Acreage

The second well located some 3,500 feet to the south of the first test on the Barco concession in Colombia being developed by the Colombian Petroleum Company (Gulf-Caribbean), has encountered the same oil producing sand as the first well.

Although no test of the capacity of the well has been made, it is known that the regularity of the structure and its content of high-grade oil with accompanying heavy gas pressure, indicates a second large producer when put on production.

MAY CHALLENGE LEGALITY OF GOLD BUYING

By MERRYLL S. RUKEYSER

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Oct. 30.—The Republican high command may, in due course, question the legality of the gold purchase operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Mr. Rukeyser

In the informality of lobby chatter, financiers, assembled here for the twenty-second annual convention of the Investment Bankers' Association, I learned yesterday that some of the Republican authors of the Reconstruction Finance legislation are perplexed over the new uses to which the new deal administration has put the emergency banking machinery. One critic questioned the right of the R. F. C. to exchange its debentures for gold at any price it sees fit.

'HANDCUFFS' RESENTED

The gold issue has not yet been formally discussed at the convention. The only criticism publicly aired against the new economic legislation centers around the new federal securities act, which many feel have placed the capital market in handcuffs.

In advising the investment bankers how to organize for constructive revision of the act, Arthur H. Dean of the New York legal firm of Sullivan and Cromwell said:

"The bankers should express their sympathy with the general objectives of the security act, they should agree to the need of full and complete information in offering circulars, which, however, should not become telephone directories.

"Moreover, the bankers must take responsibility for their negligent and fraudulent acts. Then they should explain to the public the use of the capital markets in financing activities in capital goods which will put men to work."

CLINIC ON REPUTATION

At the third of the convention forums, a clinic was held over the reputation of investment bankers and how to improve their standing before the public.

Perhaps the lashing of bankers and the exposure of bad banking practices before the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency were necessary to put the investment bankers into this mood for self questioning.

Deeply moved by the prevailing unpopularity of the bankers, the convention broke with precedent and invited journalists to get up and discuss frankly the nature of the public's case against the investment bankers.

As a matter of fact, the specific instances of chicanery and skullduggery constitute froth on the surface.

PREMISE FAULTY

New issues of the 1927-1929 period have collapsed in value because the principal premise on which bankers acted has proven false.

This premise was that reasonable economic stability had been attained in the so-called new era, and that the national income would continue on the high level of that period. In 1928 the estimated national income was $84,000,000,000. By 1932 it had fallen to approximately $42,000,000,000.

Accordingly, the reasoning of bankers on which long-term commitments were made proved incorrect as soon as it was apparent that their premise of a stable national income was wrong.

If the bankers got to the heart of their problems, they would recognize that amidst tremendous instability of economic conditions, long-term financing is difficult if not impossible.

WOULD AID FINANCING

If the bankers thoroughly appreciated their own interests, they would be keenly interested in President Roosevelt's efforts to create a higher degree of economic stability.

Under stable economic conditions with a dollar of reasonably stable purchasing power, long-term financing would be facilitated.

At present the bankers are indisposed to look into the fundamental economics which condition their calling, but are more concerned with such immediate steps as revision of the federal security act along lines which would limit the liability of directors of the borrowing corporations and of the investment bankers who sponsor the issue.

FRANKNESS URGED

In a series of short informal talks, members of the Fourth Estate advise the bankers to discard the whispers of false dignity, and to accept an attitude of greater frankness toward the public and the press.

Mr. Dean, as a representative of an important Wall Street law firm, backed up the reporters and urged bankers to see reporters themselves, instead of relying on handouts prepared by press agents.

The press representatives insisted on the need of more consideration, while news is in the making.

They also asserted the right of the press to make fair comment and independent criticism of the action of bankers. In this connection, the current articles of the Chicago newspapers in opposing the Armour reorganization deal and the associated gas and electric financing were cited.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

It's still football season, fellows!

We have heard that several patrols have football teams, but we haven't heard much about them. You have noticed in the comic strip that Junior and the Gangster's Gang are getting up teams, and practicing hard. What are you fellows doing?

If you don't want to play tackle football, which is a pretty hard game, you can play pass or touch football and have a lot of fun. Anyway, it's swell exercise, and it teaches you to use your head and to run fast.

Does anyone know where Esther Marie Schriber is located? We have her address as 116 Hamilton avenue, Pittsburgh, but Uncle Sam brought our letter to her back.

Viola Warden, of Highland avenue, Trafford, Pa., is an energetic young lady. She sends in eight pledges today and now she only needs two more before her friends can have an election for the captain and start a Junior Patrol.

Mary Margaret McGuigan, of 572 Hawkins avenue, North Braddock, sends in four pledges. They all want to join, she says, because they are sure belonging to the Junior Patrol must be great fun.

Now look at this letter from Lucy R. Coco, of 4658 Rosina way, Pittsburgh. And it's from her brother, too:

"I am going to have a club of girls and my brother, Felix, is going to have a club of boys. He is 7 years old and his birthday is on Christmas. In our club the girls are going to have sewings, making things for Christmas presents. We also will have sport games. The first thing that I am going to teach them is how they can help other people. We are going to have a party on Halloween; so are the boys.

"My brother in his club is going to have a football team and is going to have Indian and cowboy games.

"I have been chosen captain of the girls and my brother the captain of the boys. We are thinking of a name for our club."

Both Felix and Lucy send in 11 pledges each, and so they each get one of the orange and black captain's armbands. Sounds as though they were going to have two swell clubs with lots of fun, doesn't it? We hope to hear from them both soon again.

EX-ARMY STAR SEEKS BAIL

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 30.—(AP.)—Lieut. John H. Murrell, whose football playing at West Point gained him All-America distinction, will seek bail in a hearing before the United States commissioner here Wednesday on a charge of attacking Miss Blanche Ralls, 25, after a roadhouse party the night of October 21.

The officer, who is attached to the 9th Infantry, told friends he never met Miss Ralls until she joined a party of seven others which visited the roadhouse. After the party, Murrell offered to drive Miss Ralls home, investigating officers learned.

Miss Ralls was said by officers to have complained of feeling ill and Murrell drove her around, going to the Fort Sam Houston military reservation. He finally took her home, he said.

The Girl Who Won

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XVIII.

Nollie was embarrassed at this sudden appearance of her chief, Mr. Brilling.

The conversation with his fiancee the other day had annoyed and upset her. It was foolish to be disturbed, of course. Yet wasn't Miss Galbraith the daughter of the head of the firm?

She had some power, then, in the place. And were she to become more jealous and suspicious still, Nollie would doubtless lose her position.

This had been already hinted by the woman.

"What beasts some women are," thought Nollie. She had felt sorry for Mr. Brilling.

She had thought that he was already a member of the firm, and he had told her that he would be such soon . . . but added a rider about not caring for the condition.

Was he thinking of his marriage to the head's daughter, Miss Galbraith? Was his promotion dependent on that union?

It was shortly after half past seven as he stood there in the outer office, sheepishly saying he had returned to sign some letters.

His eyes looked odd. His rather good-looking face was flushed.

Had he been drinking, then? He had seemed worried during the day. He had been nervous and distrait.

He had left the office at a quarter to four, and hadn't been back since.

Nollie was on her feet as he came in preparatory to leaving.

BRILLING NERVOUS

She drew forward a basket with a pile of letters in it. She said quietly: "They're all done."

"Don't go." He took the basket, went into the inner office and sat down at his desk.

Through the open door, as he sat reading them, Nollie noticed that the hand that held the letters shook.

She turned away, going up to a mirror on her office wall, combing her hair, adjusting her hat.

"Miss Day, come in for a minute."

"Yes, Mr. Brilling. I did the letters carefully. Is everything all right?"

"No. Everything's rotten as it can be. I'm in the deuce of a fix."

Nollie said, slowly and deliberately, though her heart was beating with apprehension: "I'm sorry to hear that."

Had Miss Galbraith been making further trouble? Had she been pressing on him an immediate marriage?

Well, what had THAT to do with HER? She was but a machine, an automaton, in Mr. Brilling's life. Why upset herself with his troubles?

All that he could demand of her was efficient service in the office.

"Sit down and have a cigaret with me, Miss Day. I've got to spill the beans to someone or other."

He ran his hand through his blond hair till the front lock stood on end. He looked like a naughty, harassed little schoolboy. Worried as she was by his unrest, she couldn't help a faint smile—he looked so comical.

"I don't smoke, thanks. But if I can help you in any way that's useful, I'll be glad to." And Nollie sat down on a chair at the other side of the table.

BLAMES NOLLIE

He scribbled his signature on the letters, thrust them across to her. Then he lit a cigaret.

He smoked half of it before he spoke again. He said brusquely: "Miss Day . . . do you believe in love?"

Believe in love? Could she ever get out of her mind for one hour the image of Tony O'Brien?

Believe in love, indeed! Why, willy-nilly, love just forced itself on one.

"Why, Mr. Brilling, isn't that rather a difficult question?"

He barked at her: "Why should it be? I suppose—a girl like you—pretty and young and all that sort of thing—have half-a-dozen chaps crazy about her?"

"Indeed I have not. How did you ever come to think of such a thing?" Nollie's breath caught in amazement.

"Because you're a fascinating girl, and men aren't blind, and in a way you're responsible for the hell in a mess I'm into—"

"I? Responsible?" In what way? Again apprehension took her.

He pressed the stub of his cigarette into an ashtray. He avoided her eyes, stared gloomily, nervously, out of the window.

"Oh, I was drifting along in my own old way until you walked into this office. Suddenly he looked at her directly, accusingly. "D'you know, I noticed you the very first day you arrived with that blessed letter from Jinny Judson? I thought—darn it all—you were the sweetest-looking thing I'd ever seen—and now you've upset everything."

"Mr. Brilling—" Nollie rose to her feet, two spots of astonishment on either cheek—"you have no right to say such things to me. I've done nothing—knowingly—that would cause you embarrassment."

COMPARED TWO WOMEN

"I know, I know," he said testily, "but don't you see—just by being around the place and my getting accustomed to you and everything—you've made the other thing so difficult?"

"What other thing? What have I to do with you?" She was indignant.

"Darn it all, girl, don't you know I'm fond of you? And, that being so, and comparing someone else to you, to their disadvantage—"

She understood then, right enough. It was Miss Galbraith, of course! But she wasn't going to let him finish.

"It isn't fair to talk this way. It isn't loyal to—to the person you're engaged to—"

"But I can't go on with it, seeing the contrast between you two. It seemed all right—promotion in the firm, and all—sort of a regulation marriage of convenience. Then you came. For 14 days, having you with me nearly all the time, has given me a new viewpoint . . ."

Nollie's breath caught.

He went on, dully: "There's a proverb—something about 'Youth to youth—'"

And Miss Galbraith was many years older than Mr. Brilling. But she was the boss' daughter. Influential. Rich.

Nollie felt a distaste for this weak, vacillating man. She felt she disliked them both.

"You can leave me out of the question, Mr. Brilling. And please don't think me rude when I say you must settle your private affairs yourself."

She rose. He got up, too. As she made for the door he barred her way, putting a swift arm about her.

"Miss Day, don't go. You've got to listen. Darn it all, don't you know I'm in love with you?"

Synopsis

Nollie Day, young and pretty, goes to New York for a career. After searching in vain for a position, she faints on the street. She regains consciousness in a suspicious looking house owned by a woman called "Daffy." Nollie flees in terror when one of Daffy's "friends" make advances. Later, she obtains a position as public stenographer in a high-class hotel where she meets Mrs. Virginia Judson, a wealthy widow. Nollie substitutes for Mrs. Judson at a theater party. Mr. Hiram, with whom Mrs. Judson had the appointment, sends young and handsome Tony O'Brien in his stead. Nollie tries to explain she is not Mrs. Judson, but Tony does not hear her. After a happy evening together, Tony tells Nollie he will telephone her next day. Later Nollie sees Tony in the hotel, but before she can reach him, he disappears. She takes a new position as secretary to Jack Brilling, of the Galbraith Company. Nollie's thoughts are all of Tony. One night, after working late, Brilling invites her to dinner. Next day, Miss Galbraith enters the office, glares at Nollie, and tells her she is engaged to Brilling.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

There's this difference between reconstructed eyebrows, some are interesting, some are freakish. The now popular notion of leaving a little patch like a puff of willow at the inner corner and plucking out every other last hair irritates laughter. The eyebrow should follow the bony upper ridge of the eye socket. That's where it belongs, where Mother Nature put it, and she knows best. What the gals like about side-whiskered brows is that it gives them an appearance of the theatrical. Even so. And they ruin facial scenery.

Sound teeth are treasures to be cherished, not only for health's sake, but because defective, ugly or discolored ones knock out the foundation upon which the temple of beauty is built.

Have several tooth brushes so a dry one can be used. Soak the new brush in a solution of salt. Salt acts as a mild antiseptic and hardens bristles. It is also a first-class dentifrice when the tooth paste gives out and there's no more at hand.

Don't fail to scour your pearls at bedtime; that's when they most need renovating.

JULIUS CAESAR LANDING IN BRITAIN IN 55 B. C. (World History)

Crassus and Pompey were notable consuls following Sulla. They soon accepted Julius Caesar—who had risen from soldier and orator—in the "Triumvirate." About 57 B. C. Caesar led an army into Western Europe (Belgic War), adding territory of today's France, Holland, Belgium and Southern England to the Roman possessions. (World History)

THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL (June 17, 1775)

Boston, the British military base, was besieged by the Americans. A British fleet, arriving with reinforcements, attacked the Continentals' positions on Bunker Hill. The British Gen. Howe succeeded finally in taking the hill, but suffered heavy losses. Although forced by lack of powder to give up their positions, the Colonists won a moral victory by demonstrating that they could and would face unflinchingly, under heavy bombardment of the British battleships and land batteries of Boston, the gallant attacks of trained troops. AUTOMOBILE REAR AXLE (Transportation)

Generally it is a steel casing containing the differential gear and the two axle shafts in heavy oil.

Above: Section of rear axle and steel spoked rear wheel with brake drum. The differential gear (see Pict. Ed. Oct. 27) allows the driven rear wheels to revolve at different speeds on curves, when the inside wheel (toward the turning center) makes a shorter arc than the outer; hence needs to make fewer revolutions.

WASHINGTON AND HIS MOTHER

After the British surrender (1781) at Yorktown, the victory was to be celebrated by the Americans with a brilliant ball at Fredericksburg. Gen. Washington asked his aged mother—who still managed her farm—to participate.

"Why, son, what should I do there? They want to fete the great general, not the simple farmer woman!" she said.

The general replied: "Dear mother, they have to honor you before they fete me. You made me what I am." (Character Building)

DRIFTING SAND FILTER

It is a water purifier in which part of the sand circulates; the dirty sand to be continuously drained, washed and reinjected with the unfiltered water. Rapid filtration method is used with aluminum sulphate [Al2 (SO4) 3] as coagulant. The resulting aluminum hydroxide [Al (OH) 3] in colloidal state coagulates, carrying down other suspended particles (bacteria, coloring matter, etc.), to be retained by the sand. Arrows mark direction of waterflow. (Rogers: Industrial Chemistry)

Football As She Was in 1890

Before football became an amended riot it was a man's game played in the men's department.

The boys trained on anything they could lift. They let their hair grow long to protect their high calibre skulls, wore shin guards and spiked shoes and acquired a rash of pimples along about November.

The season wound up on Thanksgiving Day with the big game between Cornell and Pennsylvania. No lineups were printed for that game. They played anybody who was still alive.

There were no stadiums, no first aid and no time out. The coaches were the oldest players in college. As this was a high honor, naturally, everybody did their best not to graduate.

Yale, Harvard and Princeton were the big three. Which was a self-inflicted wound with intent to be exclusive. No one knows why Yale, Harvard or even Princeton should be called the big three down through the years. But they were and they reserved the rights of staggering between rows of magnificent elms. They played no other colleges except for warm-ups. In re[illegible] years the toast was in the habit of burning the baker.

Those were the days of the hurdle and the flying wedge. Both of them were legal even though the Supreme Court never said so. In the line hurdle the man with the ball ran up his own players' backs. These players were lined up in the form of steps. Each step was a foot higher than the last. At the jumping off place the runner acted like a bull on a wharf.

As there were no more hospitable backs to jump on the runner continued his dapper journey using faces for stepping stones. Another kind of hurdle was for the backfield to grab their own man by the wrists and ankles and throw him over the line. The opposing team grabbed at him in midair like minnows snapping at wet bread.

The least said about the flying wedge the better. On the kickoff the team lined up in front of the man with the ball and formed a homicidial echelon. The formation was arrow-shaped and the man in front lacked only a cow-catcher. It was too bad if any pigs got on the track.

There were other plays calculated to make a young man respect superior intelligence and a smattering of the arts and sciences. As we said before, it was a hombre's racket and no boys need apply.

A County Aquatic Park

The Squaw Run Project Has Advantages Not to Be Found in the Pool Now Proposed.

The County Commissioners announce they will ask federal aid for the construction of a 48-acre lake and swimming pool in North Park, to cost $620,000.

This is unquestionably a move in the right direction.

Pittsburgh has been sorely handicapped by its lack of facilities for aquatic sports. Again and again we have lost new industries seeking locations for their plants because we could not offer their workers the opportunities for swimming, boating and fishing that are found in the lake and seacoast cities. Declining our invitations to establish their plants here, they have said they feared because of our lack of recreation facilities their workers would not be contented.

This led the Chamber of Commerce to study the subject, and as a result of its study it recommended the creation of a county aquatic park in the Squaw Run valley, near Aspinwall, at the point where the run flows into the Allegheny River.

The County Commissioners' North Park lake project is said to have been developed within three days after it was conceived. The Chamber's Squaw Run project was given many months of careful thought by John M. Rice, consulting engineer, and the members of the Chamber's recreation committee.

The proposed Squaw Run aquatic park would occupy 115 acres and would extend from the river about 3,800 feet up the creek. The area adjoins the city's filtration park, the United States Veterans' Hospital property and the county workhouse farm.

The plans call for a swimming pool with accommodations for 17,000 persons, a wading pool for little children, an artificial lake with a boat house, an elliptical boat harbor on the river, forming a water amphitheater capable of accommodating thousands of spectators of boat races, regattas and water pageants, an administration building with facilities for restaurants and concerts, and parking space for 1,600 automobiles.

In June, 1929, when the plan was submitted to the Chamber of Commerce, the entire cost of the project, including the purchase of land, was placed at $1,388,651. Since then, of course, prices of all sorts have come down drastically.

The Squaw Run project has these advantages over the North Park scheme:

Squaw Run is more centrally located and is accessible by trolley and steam railroad, as well as by good roads. North Park can only be reached by automobile. Consequently Squaw Run would be better able to serve poor people.

The Allegheny River, with water backed up for 17 miles by the new dam at Aspinwall, would offer facilities for boat races of a kind that would be impossible in the North Park lake.

The water in the Squaw Run swimming pool would be drinking water from the city filter plant, and would be purified and recirculated. The water in the North Park lake would be untreated water from Pine Creek.

The Sun-Telegraph suggests that before the County Commissioners commit themselves irrevocably to this $620,000 North Park lake scheme they read the Chamber of Commerce report on the Squaw Run project, the report of the Citizens Committee on City Plan on water recreation, issued in September, 1923, and other available reports on this subject.

After all, a job that is to cost more than half a million dollars is worth more than three days' study.

Money Must Be Provided

The Federal Government Should Stand Ready to Supply Funds for Building Construction.

If the bankers will not supply the money for building construction, the government will have to.

The federal government, if possible in co-operation with our bankers, should find a way to again direct money into building construction. Through some means money must be made available to the building public. This will remove the biggest single obstacle to revival of building on a large scale. The removal of this obstacle will put 6,000,000 men back to work.

Business generally will not pick up until the building industry is on its feet. The building industry will not prosper until money is made available to those who want to build. Lack of money is the greatest single obstacle to a revival of private building construction.

America has as much money as it ever had. Most of this money is stagnant and is not finding its way into normal channels—particularly into building construction. The obstacles which prevent a free flow of money into this important industry must be removed.

If more reasonable mortgage laws are necessary and interest rates fair to both borrower and lender are necessary, a way should be found to make them.

It should be possible to permit the liquidation of distressed properties with little harm to our economic structure.

The financing of building construction should be made safe, easy and reasonable in cost.

These are matters for experts. A solution is not impossible.

If the bankers will not make possible the business recovery of one of our most important industries, then the government must do it.

Why Men Come Home

They Can't Afford to Stay Away.

An odd aspect of depression and prosperity periods is that in the former, fewer men desert their wives and families than in the latter.

In fact, the National Desertion Bureau is authority for the statement that the recovery of the last few months already has been reflected by the increased number of desertions throughout the country.

The bureau says:

"Adversity often binds a family group closer together for protective purposes. The year of the largest number of new cases in our bureau coincided with the most prosperous year in America's industrial history—1928. In the depression years that followed we noted a steady decrease in the number of such cases. Only in the last two or three months has this downward trend been checked.

"In a number of instances, deserters who had been away from home for a number of years found it expedient to return because of unemployment and bad times. In bad times 'other women' are expensive, while the 'old' wife often has a home and credit from local tradesmen to tide over a bad economic spell."

That sounds logical enough, and probably explains why divorce falls off in depression times also.

But it is a sad commentary on human nature—or at least on masculine nature—that prosperity should mean more broken homes.

Perhaps the NRA can do something about it.

A code for husbands seems to be needed, as in any other basic industry.

It was the best dressed of poets, Hoffenstein, too, who was sent for by his studio at 9 a. m. one morning. Dragging himself there he discovered in stark horror they wanted him to write a love scene. LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Are You "Living Under a Curse"?

Every night, now, the Little Tad and I listen to Amos 'n' Andy.

Gwan! Don't pretend you don't do likewise! And here's betting a jar of my gooseberry jam against your apple-butter that you grin as hard as we do everytime Andy tells about his curse.

Poor old Andy! He's surely had a tough time "living under the Curse" which Prince Ali Bendo has wished on him—and trying to persuade Amos to ante up ten dollars to buy him off. Every night he presented fresh evidence to prove that the Curse was a real, authentic, bonafide blight.

Still Amos doubts. How can he? Hasn't Andy stubbed his toe—chipped his coffee cup—had a hang nail—bit his tongue while he was eating pie—sneezed—burnt himself on his see-gar?

All right, go on and snicker! But is Andy any sillier than you, and you, and me? Don't we, too, convince ourselves we're "living under a curse?"

Think back how it has been these last years. Tough! One bad break after another. All of us afraid of losing our jobs. Most of us losing them. Then the line "forming to the right," asking for a hand. Frightened old folks, frantic sick folks, helpless young folks—all of them crying for help. And the bank roll dwindling, and the bills piling up, and the sickness coming on.

For a while we were brave, weren't we? Kept our heads cool. Whistled in the dark. But presently we stopped whistling. Stopped laughing and hoping. Stopped waiting for "things to let up." Unconsciously began expecting bad breaks. Began saying, "That's just my luck!"

"Didn't ah get a hang nail, Amos? Did'n ah stub mah toe 'n bite mah tongue n' burn mahself on mah see-gar?"

Andy "livin' undah his Curse"; we living under ours. And all of it just a lot of popeyed nonsense.

But haven't there been steady bad breaks? Sure there have. But they weren't a curse—and we only make more bad luck for ourselves if we treat them as such.

FOR WE DO MAKE OUR BAD LUCK—AND WE MAKE OUR GOOD LUCK.

WE MAKE IT BY WHAT WE THINK—BY WHAT WE EXPECT.

If you steadily look for good luck, you're going to get it. If you steadily look for bad luck, you'll get it. There's no numbo-jumbo about that. It isn't an occult mystery or a religious formula, and you don't have to be a bank president or a college professor to understand it. It's simply common sense, and anyone can make it work.

You get what you look for. Suppose you're an engineer interested in machinery. Everywhere you go, you'll see things that tie up with machinery. You won't deliberately look for such things. But the main trend of your nature will make you alert to such objects and opportunities. In the same way, if you're an artist you'll continually see beauty. If you're a teacher you'll see life in terms of education.

YOU GET WHAT YOU LOOK FOR. IF YOUR MIND IS ALERT, IF YOUR HEART IS EAGER AND YOU KEEP HUSTLING, THE THING YOU NEED WILL COME YOUR WAY, BECAUSE YOUR OWN DESIRE AND DETERMINATION WILL BRING IT YOUR WAY.

And that applies to "good breaks" as well as it does to material objects or mental interests. Andy's looking for signs that he's "living under a curse." And see what he finds! Things he'd never notice normally now seem "signs" because he's looking for them. Indeed, he has become so busy looking that he can't think of anything else. He sees "signs" in everything. Andy thinks he's heading for disaster fast. And he is!

But if Andy wanted to look for good luck signs he could find just as many. If he wanted to head for good luck, he could go that way just as fast. Whose fault is it, if he isn't? Prince Ali Bendo's? Or old, dumb, 'fraid-cat Andy's.

And where does that leave you—and Me?

MARRY-GO-ROUND

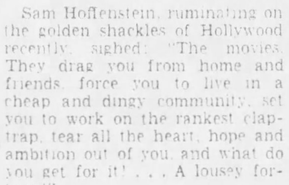
By Helen Rowland

Big Butter-and-Egg Women

The most amusing and certainly the most consoling aspect of woman's economic freedom today is the existence of the "Big-Butter-and-Egg-Women"—a brand new type of femininity.

* * *

In these bright days a girl may be a "good catch" matrimonially speaking. Not because her father has money, but because she herself is an outstanding success in some business or profession, which makes her distinctly "eligible" from an economic as well as a social point of view.



It used to be always the GIRL who was regarded as "lucky" when she landed a husband who had made good in the world. But now it is just as likely to be the gal who has made a bundle and the worthy young man who is "lucky" to land the good catch.

* * *

For every "Prince" who weds the beautiful beggar maid, there is a Princess who can afford to marry a struggling young man and give him a boost up the ladder of success. Or an ornamental young man and keep him for a pet.

* * *

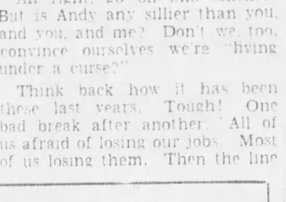
It is being done every day, both in New York and in Hollywood, where there are so many "Big-Butter-and-Egg-Women"—screen stars, beauty specialists and big business women, who have made their millions, their careers and their fame.

* * *

Over in France, where the marriages are said to be the happiest in the world, men and women have always admitted that the big problem of matrimony was the economic problem. But it is only in the last two years, since young women have had to work shoulder to shoulder with their husbands or else stay single, that American girls have seen the light. And most American men don't see it yet. They want to be the big Pooh-Bah around the house, and to bring home ALL the bacon, even if it's only half a slice. And they shudder at the thought of being married to a woman who has a bigger pay-envelope and a bigger job than their own.

* * *

It's a funny world! And marriage is getting to be like the weather: you simply can't predict how it will change by tomorrow. But the "Big-Butter-and-Egg-Woman" seems to be here to stay.



Woman is a thrill-hunter these days. And to be regarded as a "good catch" must be even a bigger, new thrill than was bobbing her hair, smoking her first cigaret or wearing her first pair of trousers—I mean "slacks."

Human Side of the News

Another System Found "to Break the Bank at Monte Carlo"—Casino "Down On Its Luck"

By Edwin C. Hill

FROM Paris comes the news that a sure system has been found to beat the bank of Monte Carlo, and that an Englishman will soon set forth to give battle to the world's greatest gamoling house. His system, he says, has been dug up from ancient Chinese texts. He believes it to be infallible, provided sufficient capital can be found to give it a fair trial. But to this writer, who has paid many a visit to Monte Carlo and watched the players come and go, there can be no doubt as to the outcome. The spinning wheel laughs at "systems."

Nor is there anything new in the discovery of a system. Hundreds have been tested, at the cost of untold fortunes. All have failed. Ever since the day, almost fifty years ago, when another Englishman broke the bank three times in the same day, while employes of the Casino scurried about to scrape enough money together to cover his winnings, hundreds of thousands of people, from every country in the world, have whirled away their money at the roulette tables.

* * *

Song Inspired By His Good Luck

THAT one lucky person was the original "man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo," and his good fortune inspired a song which was sung around the world. It was probably the best piece of advertising the famous Casino ever had, and the money he carried away was a worth-while investment. But that player's good fortune was due to no system, for the bank at Monte Carlo had defeated every system ever tried.

And if any place is haunted, the rooms at the great gambling resort must be visited today by the shades of all the unfortunates who have tried to match their skill against a bank which is invincible. The man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo did not in the slightest impair the prosperity of the place, but he surely caused the ruin of thousands who have sought a mathematical method of duplicating his good fortune.

Monte Carlo, just now, is somewhat down on its luck. The other gaming casinos on the continent have lured away most of the wild plungers, or at least what is left of them in a sorely tried world. Gone are the gambling glories of this tiny world-famous principality, and nothing can ever bring back the Russian Grand Duke and the assorted royalties who helped to make Monte Carlo the world's greatest gambling center before the war.

The place itself is as beautiful as ever. The golden sun still beams down on the glistening sapphire of the Mediterranean. The soft wind still plays through the palm trees a tuneful accompaniment to the distant sound of the whispering violin in the nearby Cafe de Paris. All of the glories with which nature endowed the town are still there, free as the wine-like air.

* * *

Marked Cards The Latest Scandal

THERE is probably no more beautiful spot or more wonderful roads on the face of the earth. But the days of great gambling have vanished, probably forever. Monte Carlo, where the rich of the world rubbed elbows with the unfortunates and the crooks, is now down on its luck. The famous gambling house has been the mecca, not only of the rich and the elegant, but of wastrels from the shady side of life.

The latest scandal to be uncovered was that of the marked cards, by means of which over $500,000 is said to have been won. With the connivance of two employes of the Casino, hundreds of packs of cards were removed from the Casino safe and treated chemically, after which they were put back in place. The players who were in on the secret wore special eyeglasses with magnifying lenses, permitting them to see marks on the backs of the cards not visible to anyone else. And by this means, a killing was made before the scheme was discovered, the police brought in and six arrests made.

Another swindle, practised around the roulette tables, netted thousands to two clever Spaniards, whose system was based not on the laws of chance, but on larcenous sleight-of-hand. The two rascals painted the palms of their hands with birdlime. When some careless player, intent on the clicking revolutions of the wheel, turned away his gaze, one or another of the chip thieves would cup a hand over his neighbor's valuable chips, one of which would adhere each time to the hand of the manipulator.

But even the thieves are leaving Monte Carlo, and perhaps some day in the not too distant future the place will attract visitors for what it really was intended to be—one of the loveliest garden spots in the world.

Postal Savings Banks Hit by Administration

By James T. Williams, Jr.

IT WILL come as a painful surprise to the plain people of the United States to hear that the Roosevelt administration is seriously considering asking Congress to abolish every Postal Savings bank in the United States.

This is what the bankers of this country have been trying to get the government to do ever since public sentiment finally forced the government to override their objections and give to the people the benefits that they enjoy under the splendid system of Postal Savings banks.

The bankers got the first news that the Postal Savings Bank System is scheduled for the junk heap. The announcement was made to the American Bankers' Association at their recent annual convention by James F. T. O'Connor, the new Comptroller of the Currency, who said:

"Congress would be justified in repealing the Postal Savings Act."

Mr. O'Connor was discussing the Federal Deposit Insurance provisions of the Glass Banking Act. He cited the enormous growth of the Postal Savings System in the last two years. He predicted that once the deposit insurance provisions of the Glass act go into effect, one thousand million dollars now deposited in Postal Savings banks would go into non-government banks.

Fortunately for the welfare of the plain people, who believe in the Postal Savings Bank System, their Senators and Representatives in Congress are not all in accord with the views of the American Bankers' Association or the Comptroller of the Currency on this question.

Postal Savings Banks a Success

MANY SENATORS and Representatives in Congress know full well that the Postal Savings System has done more during this depression to wake up and put to work the "sleeping dollars" which have been taken out of circulation and put into "mattresses, tin boxes, trunks, barns, stoves and socks" than have all the federal threats to punish hoarders by jailing them.

From the day the Government inaugurated the Postal Savings banks on January 3, 1911, when Postmaster General Frank Hitchcock opened these depositories experimentally throughout the country, they have proved successful.

And, contrary to the propaganda of the bankers and their political stoolpigeons, all deposits received by the Postal Savings System are promptly redeposited in local banks that are safe and that can satisfy the government of that fact.

The record shows that these deposits from the Postal Savings banks have been of tremendous help in strengthening local banks which had been menaced by withdrawal of funds by hysterical depositors.

The Glass Banking law amended the Postal Savings law by prohibiting the payment of interest on a demand deposit in the Postal Savings banks. But a depositor in one of these banks is still paid interest on his deposit if he gives notice of 60 days before withdrawing his money.

By this amendment the Postal Savings System was brought into line with other commercial institutions which, under the Glass act, are forbidden to pay interest on demand deposits.

Refuse to Swallow Propaganda

THIS REMOVES the only sound objection to the operation of the Postal Savings System, in the opinion of those Senators and Representatives in Congress who have refused to swallow the insidious propaganda against Postal Savings banks, which has been broadcast by those banking interests opposed to the Postal Savings System.

Only last May President Roosevelt's Third Assistant Postmaster General, in a letter to a United States Senator, said:

"To lay the ills of the banking world at the door of the Postal Savings System is unwarranted. Had it not been for the Postal Savings System, this country would have been honeycombed with hidden money."

In this system the plain people of this country repose complete confidence because, after more than 20 years' experience, they have learned that, in the words of the postal savings act itself:

"The faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of deposits made in the Postal Savings depository offices."
